Right of Way To Be Asked For District Housing Bill

Lanham Will Request Privileged Status In House Today for 50-Million Measure

Temporary Relief

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT allocates $18,900,000 for 4500 emergency dwelling units in this area. Page 19.

To Aid War Effort

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, today will ask for a privileged status that will speed House action on a bill authorizing a 50-million-dollar appropriation for homes and to facilitate public works for Federal warworkers in the District area.

Emphasizing the need of swift enactment of the bill as one means of relieving Washington's wartime congestion, Representative Lanham said last night he will apply to the Rules Committee today for a special rule expediting action on the measure.

In a report on the bill submitted to the House yesterday the committee said it had been "impressed" by the necessity for the expansion of several classes of public works contemplated by the act.

Inadequacies Admitted

"The hospital facilities (in the District) are definitely inadequate," the report said. "Further school facilities and water and sewage service and provision for fire control will also be required."

Although the report did not cite the specific number of houses to be constructed under the bill, Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer has stated that the funds will be sufficient for 10,000 new homes in this area. Erection of 4500 demountable dormitory units also is considered.

The report also said:

"The committee is very definitely of the opinion that private enterprise should supply as much of the permanent housing as is possible and that the defense housing proposed in this measure should be restricted to the minimum necessary for the additional personnel to be provided for during the emergency in connection with the war activities.

"Temporary dormitories for unmarried workers will afford opportunity for association with fellow workers, minimize the problem of transportation, keep the amount of Federal expenditure within reasonable bounds, and relieve the situation with reference to normal real estate activities when the emergency is over."

Another Wilson Measure

Representative Wilson (Republican), of Indiana, who gained wide publicity by recommending a curfew hour for women Federal workers when the committee was conducting hearings on the bill, yesterday introduced a resolution calling for "an investigation of the entire problem of the employment and utilization of civilian personnel of the Government in and near the District."

The resolution authorizes the appointment of a seven-member special House committee to study the problem "with the particular purpose of determining whether or not such civilian personnel are being procured, appointed, assigned to duty, and utilized in an efficient and economical manner."

'Buy-a-Bomber' Booth on 13th St. To Remain Open

The Junior Board of Commerce will continue to keep open its "Buy a Bomber" Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps booth at Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest, Samuel L. Samuel, chairman of the Junior Board of Commerce bonds-stamps committee, announced yesterday.

The Philippine Commissioner's office has purchased $1000 worth of defense bonds to help the "Buy a Bomber" campaign, it was announced yesterday. Employes at the office include both Filipinos and Americans.

Children kept up their part in the campaign when donations to the fund were made last night at a party of boys and girls about 10 years old at 1208 Crittenden Street Northwest.

Rep. Ford Asks House to Probe OCD 'Glamour Appointments'

MAYRIS CHANEY

Mayris Chaney Gets $4600, but Duties Are Not Clearly Defined

The fame which eluded Mayris Chaney for several years as a dancer, despite the sponsorship of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, came to her with a bang yesterday as word of her $4600 salary from the Office of Civilian Defense began to get about.

Although he was peeved by the naming of Melvyn Douglas, movie actor, to the directorship of OCD's new Arts Council, Representative Ford (Republican), of California, felt that the Chaney appointment was too much. He demanded a Congressional investigation of all OCD expenditures.

Assailing the OCD setup generally, Representative Ford said the philosophy behind "glamour appointments" seemed to stem from the idea that "this is a Roman holiday to be paid for by the Government." "These people haven't realized yet what war actually means," he declared.

Highly Paid Young Woman

At $4600 Miss Chaney is about the highest paid young woman in the Government. Most stenographers and secretaries make between $1620 and $2000 a year. Stenographers as a rule receive the lower amount, while secretaries begin usually at $1800. Some secretaries, who also have certain administrative duties (such as secretaries to Cabinet members) receive more, possibly $2600 or $3000.

It would take the combined income taxes of scores of these lower paid Government workers to pay the salary of the slender young blonde who has been placed in charge of children's activities for the division of physical fitness for the OCD. How many? Well, 200 of those making $1800 annually.

No one at OCD yesterday could explain just what Miss Chaney's duties are. It was said that since November she has been working in Philadelphia—where the physical fitness division is headquartered—and that her immediate superior is Alice Marble, the former tennis champion, and now a $1-a-year woman for Uncle Sam. The appointment never was announced by OCD, but was verified when The Post asked for specific information.

"Old Friend" of First Lady

Although the physical fitness division has been liberal with its press releases, there has been none to indicate what children's activities it considered essential to defense. They might be "Ring Around Rosy," or again they might be those childhood favorites "Drop the Handkerchief" and tree climbing.

A survey of the clippings shows that Miss Chaney came into public print more than six years ago. When she was a night club entertainer in San Francisco in 1937 she had Mrs. Roosevelt as a guest in her apartment and the two then were termed "old friends." In 1938, at the annual dinner given by President Roosevelt for his Cabinet, she introduced the "Eleanor Glide" at the White House. It was a dance created by her and her former partner, Edward Fox, and named for the First Lady.

Chaney and Fox appeared on the stage at the Earle here in 1937 and have danced at the Shoreham. Their act of ballroom dancing was called so-so by the critics. "Astists of the Dance" they called themselves, but most of their bookings seemed to come as a result of the First Lady's interest. At least, their repeat performances were few and their publicity always made good use of Miss Chaney's favor with the White House.

Key Witness In D. C. Nazi Probe Escapes

Griffin Believed To Be in Havana; Jury Action Delayed

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

William Griffin, key witness in the special grand jury investigation of Axis agents, who has been missing two weeks, was believed to be in Havana, Cuba, last night—beyond the reach of the United States courts.

Investigators believe Griffin can give important testimony about the far-flung operations of George Sylvester Viereck, the German agent who goes on trial here February 9 on charges of concealing his use of Congressmen and their franks for propaganda purposes.

Griffin vanished from New York two weeks ago, just ahead of a subpena for his appearance before the grand jury in Washington. Associates and relatives said they did know where Griffin was and Federal marshals could not serve the summons.

Attorney Wants an Out

Thomas Jefferson Ryan, New York attorney who had assured the investigators Griffin would be produced when wanted, last night said he wished "to wash my hands of the affair."

Griffin's relatives, Ryan told The Post, had assured him that Griffin would get in touch with the attorney as soon as he returned to New York Wednesday. But Griffin hadn't been heard from. Ryan, denying he knew Griffin's whereabouts, said he believed him to be in Havana.

With Griffin out of the country, the special grand jurors canceled their session yesterday morning. Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., will produce other witnesses next Tuesday.

Griffin is editor of the New York Enquirer, a paying client of the Nazi propaganda news agency Transocean, which was convicted in the District Court last summer of violating the Foreign Agents Act. Prescott Dennett, declared by the grand jury to have been Viereck's tool in propaganda activity, wrote Washington articles for the Enquirer.

He Sued Winston Churchill

Griffin was a contributor to Scribner's Commentator, the Lake Geneva, Wis., isolationist magazine whose sponsors also issued an anti-British paper called the Herald, which was financed, they claimed,

U. S. Liner, Planes Rout 3 U-Boats

Unarmed Ship Tries To Ram Attacker; Subs Flee as First Patrol Flier Appears

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—An American passenger ship arrived today after an escape from three Axis submarines which made crash dives when a patrol plane appeared on the scene while the unarmed ship was trying to ram one of the U-boats.

Although the captain of the liner (her name was withheld by the Navy) refused comment on his attempt to ram the undersea raiders, crew members said the U-boats were sighted on the surface last Sunday afternoon shortly after the vessel left a West Indies port.

"They crash-dived when the plane appeared and one of them was so close he passed under the ship," a crew member said.

Brings In Survivors

American planes escorted the vessel the rest of the day as she zigzagged through dangerous waters.

(The German high command stated in Berlin that Nazi U-boats operating off the east coast of North America had sunk six more merchant ships, totaling 47,000 tons, including an ore ship of 15,000 tons.)

The liner brought in 25 survivors of the Canadian passenger liner Lady Hawkins, torpedoed and sunk January 19, with a loss of 251 lives.

The survivors were Chief Officer Percy A. Kelly, eight members of his crew and 16 American defense workers en route to a southern base when their ship was sunk.

Kelly, a sandy-haired Nova Scotian, discounted credit given him for his cool work in guiding a lifeboat with 71 passengers through five days of rough seas preceding their rescue.

"It was the help of God that got us through," he said.

(The 71 and 5 bodies were landed at San Juan, Puerto Rico.)

Feared Subs' "Old Wheeze"

Capt. Nels Helgesen, master of the rescue ship, said that he zigzagged away when he first saw two red flares shoot up from the lifeboat.

"It's an old wheeze for a submarine to send up distress signals," he related. "I wasn't taking any chances, but I maneuvered until I saw the lifeboat's sail, and then I was satisfied."

Vincent Peoples, 34, of St. Joseph, Mo., foreman of the workers, said: "We're still on our way to our base, whenever they want to send us."

72 Americans Escape Singapore, Jap Bombs

Singapore, Feb. 1 (AP).—Seventy-two American men, women and children have left Singapore and now are well on their ways to safety, after a narrow escape when Japanese bombs exploded at the base within 75 yards of their ship.

This departure left 102 Americans in Singapore, including a few women, but the majority plan to leave on the next available ship.

Soerabaja Again Bombed in Force; Fires Started in Naval Air Base

By William Smith White
Associated Press War Editor

The Japanese appeared yesterday to be turning their main force against the Dutch East Indies in an urgent effort to gravely wound the Allied position there before the rising might of the American air arm could be fully felt.

Those islands—and particularly the chief of them, Java, with its great naval base of Soerabaja, the strongest base remaining in effective use by the United Nations—became for the moment the most critical of all Pacific theaters.

In pursuit of a quick decision, 40 enemy bombers and 20 fighter planes returned to the assault upon Soerabaja for the second successive day. Their attack—which set off fires in the naval flying base and wrought perhaps other damage not covered in the Dutch command's incomplete report—was accompanied by an apparent worsening in the immediate Dutch situation elsewhere.

Silence Is Uncomfortable

Neither from the island of Amboina, between Celebes and New Guinea, the site of the Netherlands' second greatest naval base, nor from the enemy-occupied Kendari sector of southeast Celebes was there official news, and this uncomfortable silence suggested that the invader's troops were having their way.

Meanwhile four-engined Japanese flying-boats blasted the Port Moresby area of southern New Guinea for the third time in as many days, possibly heralding a new invasion in quest of bases for attack on the Australian mainland.

An Australian communique said at least 30 bombs were dropped at Port Moresby with some damage caused to civilian buildings, although there were no casualties. The raiders also attacked various other points along the southern New Guinea coast with cannon and machinegun fire.

In Burma, the British situation was somewhat obscure but apparently had somewhat worsened.

Salween River Crossed

The imperial command acknowledged that Japanese patrols had crossed the Salween River westward in a stab apparently directed at the town of Thaton, 40 miles above fallen Moulmein, in an effort to cut off the British forces at Martaban.

Martaban, lying just above and across the mouth of the Salween from Moulmein, remained firmly in the defenders' control, although still under enemy shelling, and in bayonet fighting in that vicinity the enemy got the worst of it.

All this action was across the Gulf of Martaban from Rangoon, the real though still distant Japanese objective, and a British military spokesman gave assurances that the city would be held at all cost, since it is the head of the Burma supply road to China.

Reinforcements in Action

U. S. Fighter Planes and Pilots Beat Foe's Craft Over Java

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American fighter planes and pilots, the War Department indicated yesterday, have reinforced the United Nations in the Southwestern Pacific war zone and demonstrated an individual combat superiority over Japanese air units.

This was revealed in a War Department communique telling of an aerial engagement over Java in the Dutch East Indies between "a small formation" of American P-40 pursuit craft and a "greatly superior force" of Japanese bombers and escorting fighter planes.

Two enemy craft were shot down in the air battle—a bomber and a fighter—while one American plane is missing, the War Department said.

Meanwhile, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported that the past 24 hours saw a lull in the Battle of Bataan—in sharp contrast to the heavy fighting of the past two weeks. Combat was limited to minor clashes between patrols, he said.

The air battle over Java marked the first time United States Army pursuit planes have been reported in action in the southwest Pacific. It was believed here they might be a small vanguard of a flow of American reinforcements to that critical war area.

American-made P-40s have been used by the Dutch, by the American volunteer fliers in Burma and perhaps by the British in Singapore, but these were on hand before the war began. Similarly, Gen. MacArthur still has some of the fighters left from his pre-war air force in the Philippines.

Large American bombers—probably all of the four-engine Flying Fortress type—have given notable service in the battles over the East Indies and Malaya to date.

Artillery Duel Goes On All Day Despite Strafing By Nippon Planes

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Feb. 5.—Behind the moat-like protection of Johore Strait, British artillerymen traded punches today with Japanese batteries pointed at Singapore Island and, one after another, silenced an unspecified number of enemy guns.

The Singapore gunners scored despite the enemy's continued aerial bombing and strafing from the air.

High-flying enemy bombers attacked shipping in the Singapore harbor while lighter planes dive-bombed and strafed other areas of the island in the face of determined opposition from a number of Hurricane fighters.

Big Guns Roar All Day

The artillery fighting opened last evening and continued today from sunrise to sunset. Thus, the sixth day of the siege found the besiegers trying to shell the besieged out of north shore positions facing Johore Bahru. But the British gave as good as they got.

Besides knocking out Japanese guns, the defenders also smashed at enemy observation posts and transport facilities carrying Japanese troops into position for the expected water-jump assault on this island stronghold.

The daily communique said that the results of the Japanese shelling were "negligible."

While the British were hammering transport in the Johore Bahru area, R. A. F. planes on reconnaissance reported "much enemy movement southward in Johore."

[Editor's note—The Tokyo radio had claimed that the general offensive against Singapore was launched at 6 p. m. Wednesday in a driving squall. There was no substantiation from other sources of the Nipponese report.]

Strait Greatest Obstacle

Japanese forces have been streaming southward through that southernmost state of Malaya, taking up assault positions around Johore Bahru, since the defenders pulled back into their strategic island.

Johore Strait, the curving, inlet-studded waterway which makes Singapore an island has become a watery no-man's-land. Ranging in width from a half mile to a mile and a half, the strait, backed by artillery and troops on a shortened line, has become the greatest obstacle encountered by the Japanese in their march through Malaya.

Even a feint at crossing is bound to be a costly maneuver.

The Japanese, no doubt, are counting on gaining domination of the air by ruthless bombing and strafing to pave the way for any attempt to force the strait. Sixty-three civilians have been killed and Vallejo, Calif., Feb. 5.—FBI agents, acting to nip fifth column activity around the huge Mare Island Navy Yard, raided Japanese and Italian alien-owned establishments in Vallejo today.

The officers, aided by local authorities, seized at least 15 persons before nightfall and marked the remains of Solano County, outside the City of Vallejo, for further sorties tonight.

A complete set of United States Navy signal flags, at least two guns, and illegally held cameras and radios were among contraband material seized from the aliens.

Nat Peiper, San Francisco FBI head, personally led 25 agents and more than 30 local officers in the raid.

He said:

"We're doing this on definite suspicions of espionage in the area."

Aliens picked up were taken to the Vallejo police court room for questioning. Almost all those in custody were Japanese. One was a Japanese woman.

Opening their drive during the mid-afternoon, the officers quickly swept down streets dotted with laundries, restaurants and other businesses, which exist largely from the trade of naval personnel and navy yard workers.

The raid was the second in two days on the West Coast. Yesterday at Seattle, the FBI reported the arrest of 15 Japanese aliens on Bainbridge Island and the seizure of a quantity of explosives and firearms. The island has a strategic position near the Bremerton Navy Yard.

Moscow, Feb. 5.—President Michael Kalinin told the people tonight that "the hour is near when all the occupied (Soviet) republics will return to the family," and declared that Adolf Hitler's dream of conquest "now is pursuing him like a shadow" back across the snowy battlefields of Russia.

The greatly augmented Red army, he said, now is approaching the borders of White Russia, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, while in the south "every day more occupied places in the Ukraine return to their country."

In some sectors the Germans have been hurled back 175 miles since the mighty counter-offensive began at the gates of Moscow early in December, and this, "despite a fierce fight for every inch of ground," he said.

Destroy Three Nazi Regiments

The midnight Soviet communique said the Red army still was overcoming German resistance, that one Russian unit had wiped out three Nazi infantry regiments on the central front while 800 Nazis had been slain on the Kalinin, or northwestern front. A total two-day bag of 47 German planes was claimed compared to ten Red craft lost.

U. S. to Provide Ships for Uruguay Coastal Patrol

Montevideo, Feb. 5 (AP).—With vessels provided by the United States and manned by Uruguayan crews, Uruguay will patrol her strategic coasts on the Atlantic and the River Plate estuary.

The disclosure was made tonight by Defense Minister Gen. Julio Roletti, who said this step had been taken to maintain pledges of continental solidarity. These pledges, he said, have taken on new meaning since Uruguay's recent break with the Axis.

Roletti explained that the Uruguayan navy as constituted is unequal to the patrol task, but he added that his government had been informed by Washington that United States vessels would be provided for the Uruguayan crews.

Unanimous House Adopts Bill To Regulate 'Baby Brokers'

By unanimous consent and without comment the House yesterday approved the District "baby broker" bill, aimed to bring local child adoption agencies under the surveillance of a special committee appointed by the Commissioners. The measure next goes to the Senate.

Lax methods of child-placement agencies in Washington were first brought to public attention by a series of articles in The Post entitled "Babies for Sale." Civic organizations took up the demand for adequate control in placing children under the age of 16 in homes, and the bill was drawn up by the corporation counsel's office.

The bill provides that all adoption agencies shall be licensed by the Commissioners. Preceding issuance of any license a thorough investigation of the applicant agency would be made by the Board of Public Welfare.

The report on the bill declares that "one of the most important effects of the act will be in the prevention of careless placement of babies for adoption, without adequate consideration of the interests of the parents, the children and the adopting parents."

A penalty of $300 fine or 90 days in jail is provided for violation of any of the regulations promulgated under the act.

The bill directs the Commissioners to appoint a committee of eight members to formulate and adopt rules and regulations providing standards of placement, care and

Medal Granted Briton Whose Painted 'SOS' Saved Seized Ship

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 5.—Thomas Huggett, a steward aboard the German captured 8046-ton tanker, San Casimiro, was awarded the British Empire Medal tonight for his feat a year ago in surreptitiously painting a 3-foot-high "SOS" deck sign which enabled British patrols to recapture the ship.

The San Casimiro was taken by the German battleship Gneisenau last March in the western Atlantic when a prize crew was put aboard her.

"You'll never get through our patrols," British seamen told the lieutenant who stowed them below deck.

As the tanker neared England en route to a German-held port, a British plane from the aircraft-carrier Ark Royal flew over.

British crewmen tried to wave table clothes from the tanker's portholes, but the Nazi crew, armed with machine-guns put a stop to that.

Then Huggett got his idea. Mixing a paste of flour and water, he evaded the prize crewmen, found a bit of uninhabited deck, and painted his big sign.

When the Nazi commander, Lieut Grenz, discovered it, he told Huggett:

"My compliments. A nice job. Now scrub it off."

But a British plane had spotted the sign, and in a short time the British battle cruiser Renown appeared on the horizon and recaptured the ship despite Nazi attempts to scuttle her.

Aid to China Waits Pen of President

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Blank check authority to advance 500 million dollars in loans, credit and other financial aid to China was placed on the President's desk last night after a record four-day trip through Congress.

The Senate in 20 minutes approved the "no strings" war loan, 74 to 0, on Administration assurances that the sum is urgently needed to supply China with guns and stable currency to keep Chiang Kai-shek's fighting legions in the field.

Topping 200 million dollars already made available by Britain, the 500-million-dollar grant will enable China to bolster its finances, keep Japanese forces engaged, and possibly eventually take the offensive, Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told the Senate.

Unopposed Senate action followed unanimous House approval on Wednesday. High State Department officials and the Secretaries of War, Navy, Treasury and Commerce made two trips to the Capitol in three days to advise swift passage.

While testimony was executive, committeemen made clear that in addition to military and dollar assistance the loan was designed to strengthen Chinese morale and offset any doubt as to American and British intentions to go "all out" in the Pacific.

Whether or not the Burma Road is cut by Japan, Senator Connally said the loan would enable China to stiffen her internal economy and step up her own arms production. It would be in addition to lend-lease help already being given.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said he favored the loan "to the extent the money is used for strengthening the internal credit of China," but opposed its use "for some other purposes" that would result in "disappointment." Due to the military nature of committee testimony, he said he could not make "a full and frank statement."

In a dispatch meanwhile from Chungking datelined January 17, Dr. Sun Fo, speaker of the Chinese House, had been quoted as follows:

"If the United States and Britain intend to allow Japan a free rein in the Far East, while they are finishing off Hitler, as seems to have been indicated in recent speeches of Alexander (A. V. Alexander, Britain's first lord of the admiralty) and Knox (Secretary of the Navy Knox), there is grave doubt in Chunking as to the wisdom of China's continuing to fight, as she now is doing so successfully."

On leaving the committee room, Secretary of Navy Knox was questioned on the Singapore announcement that "great reinforcements" were en route, but declined comment.

In the House, Representative Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the War Appropriations Subcommittee, told reporters there was reason to believe that "Singapore will not fall."

more than 200 injured in the past two days. They are virtually without shelter.

But the Japanese have not yet put down the British challenge in the air. Hurricane fighters intercepted a large formation over Singapore this morning, shot down one of the attackers for sure, probably got a second and damaged a third.

Shipping in the harbor was also attacked. An oil tanker at the naval base which was set on fire two days ago by enemy bombing is still burning.

Commandos Raiding Japanese in Malaya

London (Friday), Feb. 6 (U.P.).—The London Daily Mail reported today that British Commandos, shock troops of the imperial forces, have crossed the strait from Singapore and are operating against Japanese communications on the Malaya mainland.

The dispatch said the Commandos, armed with grenades and tommy guns, carried iron rations and acted under orders to harass and destroy the enemy wherever they were able to strike at him. It said one party already had returned safely to Singapore.

U. S. Fighter Planes and Pilots Beat Foe's Craft

Whether these are reinforcements of part of MacArthur's force is not known, but the problem of getting these long-range craft to the Far East is simpler than sending in the little one-seater fighting craft.

The big bombers can be flown from the United States to the East Indies, while the short range fighters normally must be shipped by freighter.

There was no indication in the War Department communique, however, that there is any large number of American fighter craft in the Southwest Pacific, or that major American air reinforcements are about to go into action there.

Reinforcements Expected

Sir Archibald Wavell, generalissimo in charge of the United Nations forces in the Southwest Pacific, however, announced Wednesday that British and American reinforcements are on their way.

The War Department communique did not state where over Java the aerial fight between American and Japanese craft took place, but dispatches from Batavia told of another enemy bombing raid on Soerabaja, the principal Dutch naval base.

The P-40s now in action in the Indies are fast, maneuverable and heavily armed craft built by Curtiss-Wright. Latest models of the type are said to pack a tremendous machine-gun wallop and to be capable of speeds close to 400 miles an hour.

Text of Communique

The text of the War Department communique, No. 92 of the war, follows:

"1. Philippine theater. There was a lull in the Battle of Bataan during the past 24 hours. Combat was limited to relatively minor patrol actions which lacked the savage character of the fighting which has been almost continuous during the past two weeks. The Japanese troops confronting our right sector are under the command of Lieut. Gen. Akira Nara, and those facing our left are under Lieut. Gen. Naoki Kimura. There was no marked activity in either sector.

"2. Netherlands Indies. Over Java a small formation of American Army P-40 fighting planes encountered a greatly superior force of Japanese bombers, escorted by pursuit aircraft. In the ensuing combat one enemy bomber and one enemy pursuit plane were shot down. One of our planes is missing.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas."

WHICH . . OF THESE THREE ARE YOU?
Here are three men who are thinkers . . . men with ability . . . men with IDEAS
BUT these men are different
1 This man can conduct a meeting and speak acceptably before groups but he realizes that guided practice will add refinements which will mean more prestige, added poise, richer rewards. He is a successful executive and will take this training.
2 The second person has the courage to participate in a meeting but he is uncomfortable and "handconscious" while doing it. One or two from the audience politely say, "You made a good talk," but in this person's own mind he wonders for a week just what the rest thought.
3 The third has just as many ideas as the other two, but he is held fast to his chair by undue modesty or surplus nervousness, caused simply by the lack of speaking practice. Someone else gets the credit for his ideas.
ALL THREE TYPES, men and women, have enrolled in the groups now forming in German Atrocities Described by Earle

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—Life in occupied Europe "is so horrible, it isn't worth living," George H. Earle, United States Minister to Bulgaria, told a charity campaign luncheon group today.

The diplomat, recalled when Bulgaria declared war on the United States in December, made his official report to the State Department in Washington yesterday.

Earle said in a speech that while he was in Bulgaria Russian parachutists landed there to stir a revolution, but were captured, soaked with gasoline, and set afire by the Gestapo "to make them confess."

"Life is so horrible, with absolutely no security of any kind, it just isn't worthwhile," he declared.

"The German military are very efficient and very ruthless. They were merciless when they thought it would serve their ends best. The Gestapo are the horrors of Germany. They furnish the sadistic, horrible things that go on."

Earl said he talked to a German woman who said the Reich "seemed to have forgotten that they lost the last war because of the collapse of the home front."

"She said the Germans were throwing everything to the Army, taking from the people at home, and that the sick were not being taken care of. She felt that this was a great mistake."

As an example of what he called German ruthelessness, Earle said the Luftwaffe blasted "two or three" Serbian villages "off the face of the earth" in retaliation for a Serbian attack on a column of troops.

"That is merciless," Earle said; "that is ruthless, but they do it for a purpose.

"The Gestapo, though, when they captured Russian Communists who dropped by parachutes on Bulgarian soil to start a revolution among the Bulgarian people, would take these men, strip them naked, pour gasoline on certain parts of their anatomy and set it on fire to make them confess.

"It's a terrible thing to live in a country where you know you might disappear any time," Earle said.

"If Germany does conquer Europe and Africa, and Japan gets control of Asia, it is going to be just too bad for us," Earle warned.

Somebody's Face Is Red

New York, Feb. 5 (INS).—The war of the wave lengths became confused tonight when the Berlin technician whose job it is to jam anti-Axis broadcasts blurred out the Vichy station, instead. The mistake was reported by the N. B. C. listening post.

Axis Vanguard Nears Tobruk

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 5.—Spearheads of the Axis army tonight were believed within 50 miles of Tobruk in the counteroffensive which has swept British forces back some 180 miles since German and Italian troops occupied Bengasi.

While the British command reported only patrol activity and operations of mobile columns "along the whole of our front," the latest high-water mark of the Axis eastward push was indicated in an R. A. F. communique which said British bombers had been active east and west of Tmimi.

Situated at the eastern base of the Cirenaican hump, Tmimi itself is 60 miles west of Tobruk and about 140 miles airline from the Libyan-Egyptian border.

(The Italian high command said only that Axis forces under Marshal Erwin Rommel had driven east of Derna, 40 miles northwest of Tmimi.)

The R. A. F. also said its fighter planes machine-gunned enemy vehicles in the forward sectors and that in a bombing raid on Sicily yesterday a freight train and railway bridge were attacked "with good results."

Eight R. A. F. planes were listed as missing from operations that included defense against a large enemy bombing squadron under strong fighter escort which staged another assault on Malta. "Several" raiders were said to have been damaged.

Soil Soon to Be Free of Foe, Reds Told

battle had been under way for days at the approaches to an important town in the northwest. This town, B. B. C. suggested, was Velikie Luki, key junction on the Moscow-Riga Railway west of Rzhev and only 85 miles from the Latvian border.]

Kalinin told the people in a message splashed across the newspapers' front pages that Hitler "sacrificed everything trying to realize his dream of occupying Moscow. . . . He paid a lot for it. He will pay more."

The Red army last was reported officially operating in the northwest in the Kholm area, some 100 miles from Latvia and Estonia; below Smolensk in the Kirov sector it also was about the same distance from White Russia; in the Ukraine Marshal Timoshenko's troops were beyond Lozovaya, important railway junction between the Donets and Dnieper Rivers on the road to the big industrial center of Dnieperopetrovsk.

All According to Plan

The Soviet President said the Russian offensive was a carefully conceived plan launched after a strategic retreat enabled the Red army to weld more millions of peasants into a mighty striking force.

And he indicated that the Russians do not intend to allow the Germans to dig in and get set for a spring offensive.

"The Germans never will recapture the initiative now gained by the Red army," Kalinin declared.

The Russians were reported to be threatening many vital communication points despite the arrival of many fresh Nazi divisions on the long front.

The Red army has already cut or is dangerously near cutting the Leningrad-Vitebsk railway in the northwest; has in fact cut the Rzhev-Vyazma-Bryansk railway in the center; and is imperiling the entire Nazi communication system linking Orel, Kursk, Kharkov and Stalino.

Unconfirmed dispatches said the Russians had made new gains both north and south of Kharkov in the effort to turn the German flank based at Taganrog on the Sea of Azov.

Bishop Tucker Fears A Postwar Crisis

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—Presiding Bishop Henry St. George Tucker told the Episcopal House of Bishops today that he foresaw a more terrbile postwar crisis unless moral defects "which in the past have undermined and weakened democratic institutions are eliminated."

The bishop's declaration was incorporated in a statement to the church which took the place of the annual pastoral letter. The statement called for an aggressive attitude by the church and continuance of its efforts rather than any curtailment due to the war.

British Isles Losses Great

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Feb. 5.—The British government issued here today statistics showing that 71.3 per cent of the casualties suffered by British land forces in the war up to the recent campaigns in Malaya and Africa were among troops of the United Kingdom, recruited in England, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

In making public the figures, the British government said that reports of sea and air casualties were not available, but that the United Kingdom would show even higher percentages of losses as contrasted with the dominions and the colonies. On land the dominions' losses were 18.2 per cent of the total, the colonies 5 and Indian troops 5.5.

The figures were an effective refutation of the often heard canard that colonial and dominion troops had conducted most of the fighting and suffered most of the casualties for the British. It was pointed out that the United Kingdom percentage of losses would be actually higher than 71.3 per cent if the fact that one-third of every Indian division consisted of United Kingdom troops was taken into account.

Figures Published

The statement listed casualties as follows:

British army, up to Oct. 18, 1941	100,000
Royal navy, up to Oct. 18, 1941	20,000
Royal Air Force, up to May 31, '41	10,996
Merchant Marine, up to Nov. 27, '41	9,454
Australia, up to Oct. 18, 1941	13,000
India, up to Oct. 18, 1941	7,000
New Zealand, up to Oct. 18, 1941	6,000
South Africa, up to Jan. 4, 1942	5,179
Canada, up to Nov. 26, 1941	2,335
Newfoundland, up to July 31, '41	106

Since the statement of casualties was prepared, it was said, considerable losses have been suffered by the British in Africa and Malaya.

"In the principal campaigns of this war the proportions of troops engaged have been as follows," the statement continued. "Western Front (France and Belgium) — seventy times as many United Kingdom troops as from the whole of the rest of the empire.

"In the first and second Libyan campaigns, and in Eritrea, where most of the East African fighting took place, more than half the forces involved were from the United Kingdom.

All British in Norway

"Norway: No dominions or colonial troops participated.

"Greece: Percentages were United Kingdom, 33; Australia, 30; New Zealand, 29, and Palestine and Cyprus, 8.

"Crete: United Kingdom, 46; New Zealand, 26; Australia, 23, and Palestine and Cyprus, 5.

"No details are yet available for Malaya. But owing to its geographical position and to shipping problems the proportion of United Kingdom troops has been lower than in the other campaigns—probably about one quarter of the total force.

"When the Far Eastern phase of the war opened last December, the United Kingdom had nearly four times as many men serving abroad as the four dominions—Australia, New Zealand, Canada and South Africa—had had serving outside their respective territories."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

PATRICK J. McGROARY, new manager of Restaurant "823"

"BLUE BARRON IN VICTORY ON SUNDAY. Brace yourself for a tremendous Sunday! "Blue" Barron and his band, one of the most colorful outfits in the country, are coming to the Victory Room for Sunday only. They'll play for tea dancing and in the evening. "Blue" Barron is the first musical discovery of Mrs. Maria Kramer, owner of the Roosevelt Hotel, who's in a class of her own as a band discoverer. She found him in Cleveland, of all places! . . . At this point we should tell you that Mrs. Kramer has just writtten herself a song called "I'm Tryin'," a title that is the apotheosis of understatement for a lady who accomplishes so much.

Evelyn Knight, the blonde lorelei of the King Cole Room, will return there on Monday after a Florida vacation. This gives you two chances to say a fond adieu to charming Dorothy Murray.

"WESTERN HE-MAN SPHERE." That is the name evolved in a second by Manager Russell A. Conn, of the Ambassador Hotel, for a Hi Hat specialty night with the spot's new Double Deuces togged out as cowboys and cowgirls. Inspiration, we calls it.

DEL RIO IS ROLLING ALONG like "Ol' Man River; with crowds so big that the place looks like a head waiter's dream. And no wonder. The spot looks like a movie set, the Dick Stabile music is a glowing pattern of modern rhythm, Gracie Barrie sings with the same ardent vim that made her work outstanding in "Crazy With the Heat."

EAR CARESSING. The ever-so-soft trumpet soloing by Clarence Nelson, of Joseph Sudy's orchestra, in the Cosmos Room. Unless you look at him, you get the idea you're listening to a violin or 'cello . . .

The new "euphonium" (a combo of bass and trombone) being played by Roy Ferguson, of Layton Bailey's band in the Metronome Room. Especially when he does excerpts from that lovely old show, "Rio Rita" . . . The stunning arrangement of "Blues in the Night," now offered by Don Carper's Five in the Cafe Caprice . . . Patricia Prochnik's piquant warbling of her newest sing, "Teasin," in the Pall Mall Room . . . "All For You," as played and sung by El Patio's Four Men of Rhythm. This taking number was writtten by Leader Mike Pedicin and Guitarist Dave Appel.

The Balalaika has a new mistress of ceremonies, Alla Moscova, a blonde and beautiful Russian. She's also a brilliant comedienne, and will probably figure in some of the Balalaika skits.

RARE FEASTS. When Owner Burt Lopatin, of Burt's Trans-Lux, saw a bunch of the little orphans from St. Ann's in front of the March o' Dimes last week, he asked the sister in charge to bring them in for lunch. There were 36 of them and did they have a big time! . . . Leader Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, lately took his first evening off in almost eight years—to attend that rare event—the annual Skeet Club dinner at Kenwood Country Club. The menu included quail, partridge, venison, wild boar and "marsh rabbit" (muskrat), all shot by the members in Canada.

FANCY STEPPING. The speedy and graceful "pinwheel dance" by beauteous Margie Greene at the Casino Royal . . . The highly realistic impression of Eleanor Powell being done by little Mary Jane Brown at Paul Young's . . . The amazing agility of dancer Joey Deane in the new Lotus revue. 'S a wonder he doesn't have a stroke . . . The smooth grace of Enrica and Novello at the Troika. They're a picture in every pose.

Gene Archer, new baritoning at the Shoreham, should be press agented as "King of Encores." The audience always demands a half dozen extra numbers from him.

IN THE ARMY. Don Stone, manager of the Lounge Riviera, will soon join the Army as first lieutenant . . . That good looking young assistant at Crossroads on the weekends is Sergt. Benny Bass, of Camp Belvoir, who used to be a full-time Crossroadster . . . Owner Bill Kavakos, of Kavakos' Grill, is hoping that his soldier brother, John, will be able to come home on his weekend leave, too, and help out with the Saturday and Sunday crowds.

RECOMMENDED ROVING. You don't know your Washington orchestras unless you've heard Jack Maggio's Band at the Nightingale. Any musician in town will tell you that it's the tops in modern rhythm and clever technic of arrangement . . . Also down in the countryside you'll find the snazzy Charlie Parrish Orchestra at the Log Tavern. All of the dancing youngsters vow it's strictly "solid."

ODDITY DEPARTMENT. Drummer Paul Schlegel, of Grant Thompson's crew in the Neptune Room is currently astounding the customers with a comedy get-up including red ear muffs, a House of David beard and an Uncle Tom wig . . . Maestro Paul Kain, of Mayfair, has given up collecting Van Gogh prints and Charvet neckties, says he's now collecting tax receipts . . . Jules James, owner of the Restaurant "400" says he's seen Constantine Oumansky, former Russian Ambassador lately, but the Russian Embassy insists that Oumansky's been in Russia for six months . . . You don't get salt and pepper at the Old New Orleans unless you ask for it. The chef doesn't think you ought to alter his impeccable seasoning.

Men in White Work Miracles For MacArthur

By Frank Hewlett
United Press Staff Writer

With Gen. MacArthur's Army in the Philippines, Feb. 5.—The doughty Filipino scout, looking up from the operating table of Bataan field hospital No. 1, didn't know much about "men in white" or "microbe hunters," but he knew that the tired surgeon working over his mangled leg with strong, sure fingers was his friend, and he managed to grin as the wound was probed.

This particular "man in white" was Capt. Alfred Weinstein, of Atlanta, Ga., one of the staff of 12 Army surgeons working day and night under extreme difficulties to ease the suffering and save the lives of American and Filipino soldiers fighting to hold back Japanese hordes on Bataan Peninsula.

The hospital, under the command of Col. James W. Duckworth, of San Francisco, a veteran of the field hospitals of France in the first World War, handled 90 per cent of the Army's wounded. Since Gen. MacArthur pitched his line across Bataan and defied the enemy to drive him out, the hospital has been moved from time to time, but its efficiency has not been affected.

No Priorities Here

Officers lie alongside Filipino and American privates, for Colonel Duckworth insists on equal treatment for all and operating room priorities for none.

There is insufficient electrical power, so surgeons must work without the benefit of X-rays in their delicate tasks. Sterilization offers a serious problem, too, in this country that for years has had its plagues and epidemics, but the doctors and the equally hard-working nurses are doing wonders.

At another operating table Col. Frank Adams, of Tampa, Fla., was performing a complicated abdominal operation on a sergeant who had been hit by a .50 caliber machine-gun bullet.

While I was talking with Capt. Weinstein, I was surprised to see Lieut. Claud M. Fraleigh, of Gulfport, Miss., my guide on this tour, slip into an operating gown, don rubber gloves and perform a dental operation on a Filipino.

The soldier was lucky, Fraleigh said, for the bullet that tore through his mouth from the side had only ripped away most of his teeth.

"A little higher and it would have killed him," he said. "A little lower and it would have broken his jaw. Now all he needs is a set of false teeth and he'll be as good as ever."

The Navy Is There, Too

Navy surgeons are on the job, too. One I met was Commander Carey M. Smith, of San Diego. He was transferred here after the hospital at Cavite was evacuated.

The strain on the staff is relieved somewhat by the good humor of the Filipinos who love to tell of their encounters with the enemy. All natives are "Joe" to the doctors, and an officer told of one brought in with his right hand almost shot away.

"Joe grinned despite the pain and help up four fingers on his good hand," the doctor said. "He meant he had just killed four Japs. He said he spotted them in a fox hole and threw a grenade. He said: 'There big explosion. All damn Jap dead. All four.'"

Thought Spying 'Might Be Fun,' Girl Testifies

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—An 18-year-old German-born high school girl, the Government's chief witness in the espionage trial of seven persons, said today that the lone woman defendant told her she disposed of a short-wave radio transmitter in August, 1941, shortly before the FBI broke up an alleged spy ring.

The girl, blond Lucy Boehmler, asserted that Mrs. Helen Pauline Mayer, a defendant, informed her that she had destroyed papers belonging to Kurt Frederick Ludwig, alleged ring leader, and had "gotten rid of" a radio transmitter in her home.

Miss Boehmler, who has pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the Espionage Act, said she received $25 a week as secretary to Ludwig and Ulrich von der Osten, described by United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa as the master-mind of the ring. Von der Osten was killed last spring in a taxicab accident.

"Thought It Might Be Fun"

"I don't know why I accepted the job," she said. "I don't think it was the salary—I thought it might be a lot of fun."

She added that it was the most lucrative position she had ever held.

"Didn't you know it was espionage work?" asked Warren J. Heeg, of defense counsel.

"I never thought of it," Miss Boehmler replied. "I knew the reports sent to Portugal and Spain related to national defense but I never thought it would harm the United States."

Earlier the defense attorney demanded: "Is your allegiance or loyalty as an individual to Germany or the United States?"

"To the United States—there's no question in my mind about that," the witness responded.

In previous testimony today she said that Ludwig fled to a Pocono Mountain hideout after the FBI's 1941 spy roundup—which resulted in 33 convictions—and later fled westward with the FBI on his trail. He was arrested near Seattle.

He wrote her postal cards, Miss Boehmler said, on most of which he reported that "the competition is getting bad," which she said meant that the Federal agents were following him closely.

She said that she visited Ludwig in his Pocono hideout with Mrs. Mayer, Hans Helmuth Pagel, and Karl Mueller, defendants, in July, 1941. She asserted that Mrs. Mayer made plans to leave for Japan with information on defense industries, Army camps, and the huge Douglas B-19 bomber.

The other defendants in the case—New York's second spy trial within six months—are Rence C. Froehlich, 30; Paul T. Borchardt, 55, and Frederick Schlosser, 19.

Radio Falling Into Tub Kills Chicago Girl, 12

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Myra Donnelley, 12-year-old daughter of the socially prominent Elliott Donnelleys, was found dead in a bathtub today, victim of an accidental shock which Coroner J. L. Taylor said was caused by a portable radio falling into the water.

She had taken the radio into the bathroom, telling her parents she didn't want to miss a favorite program.

U. S. Leaflets Deluge France

In the most extensive pamphlet bombing of the war, much of occupied France has been showered with American pledges that the Nazis eventually will be thrown out of France and hammered into defeat.

A total of about 3,500,000 leaflets, Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said yesterday, have been dropped by R. A. F. fliers in two extensive sweeps over occupied France. He called it the "biggest pamphlet bombing job ever done."

Early did not say when the second bombing took place, but disclosed that on this expedition 397,500 copies of American Pamphlet No. 2 were dropped in addition to thousands of copies No. 1, which previously had been made public.

No. 2 included excerpts from President Roosevelt's annual message to Congress telling of this country's plans to produce 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 anti-aircraft guns and 18,000,000 tons of merchant ships this year and next.

It also included Mr. Roosevelt's promise that the United States will "put the weapons of war at the proper time into the hands of those men in the conquered nations who stand ready to seize the first opportunity to revolt."

Bombing expedition No. 2 was centered chiefly on the Brittany peninsula—maritime section which might be the invasion point for any United Nations expeditionary force to the European continent.

Mother and Son Return From War Zone...

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Winds had just blown the rain out to sea and the night was like moist velvet on Samoa, "paradise" to Mrs. Alston Richardson, Navy man's wife, when the shells came moaning in off the ocean.

Mrs. Richardson, safely, comfortably, remembered it yesterday with her arm around her son, Robert, 11, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Darne, in Vienna, Va. Robert had helped her that night, rubbing the sleep from his eyes while they ran across the mud and slippery rocks, hearing the shells burst not too distantly and turning to watch the jagged flashes from the exploding shells.

"It was O.K.," said Robert as if recalling a Fourth of July fireworks display.

He and his mother—two months in Samoa when the sudden but expected attack did occur (2:30 a. m., Sunday, January 11)—crouched that night in a refuge hearing the firing stop quick as it started. Everyone, that is, the women and children who had been kept together since the war started December 7, met the expected—an attack—"as orderly as anything," Mrs. Richardson remembered.

Robert and his mother reached San Francisco Sunday. Nothing worse had occurred on the tedious voyage home than rough sea weather; and returning to Vienna they crossed the American continent for the eighth time.

Mrs. Alston Richardson and her son, Robert, 11, after their return to Vienna, Va., yesterday

Robert starts today in the sixth grade of Vienna Elementary School, remembering a small unnamed stream he and the Navy sons swam and spashed about in for two months in Samoa and the sudden streaks of jagged roaring light that sent him out of bed and sliding, holding his mother's arm, across the mud and wet rocks.

Every morning since December 7 all the women and children had been dispersed from possible places of danger on the island. To work this out they went to bed at 9 p. m. and arising at 4 a. m. went to their refuge. A chaplain oversaw the precaution. They remained in the refuge until daylight. It was a part of routine, like Robert's attendance at the school taught by Navy wives, like his searching the coral places for sea shells and swimming in the creek.

When the attack came they were asleep and Mrs. Richardson didn't hear the first falling shell. But in a moment she heard the chaplain calling everybody "and then I heard a good loud one."

"We had been expecting it and the morale was fine. The place had been a paradise," she said.

Nothing had struck against the slow-moving hours of it until 2:30 a. m. January 11. "When the war started we thought it was a pipe dream and I called my husband (a Navy electrician's mate) to ask him if it were true." After that they carried gas masks.

Mrs. Richardson's husband saw his family leave, told Robert to look after his mother and he did see her to the end of it, up the front steps of his grandparents' home yesterday with a wake of neighbors and old friends anxious to hear them tell about what the Japs did and if they could actually see the wierd gunflashes out at sea.

... Women Saw Japs Attack Pearl Harbor

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

More concerned about friends on naval ships being pounded by Japanese airplanes than about her own safety, Miss Dorothy Clay Ramspeck, 21-year-old daughter of Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, who recently returned from a visit to the Hawaiian Islands, stood on Kamehameha Heights, near Pearl Harbor, on December 7 to get a better view of the spectacle.

A few hours earlier, Miss Ramspeck and friends had wound up an evening of dancing by taking a 1 a. m. "swim among the submarines," at Waikiki Beach.

The attack, which did not faze the Congressman's pretty blonde daughter, looked "just like a movie," she told a reporter yesterday while seated in her family's apartment at 3601 Connecticut Avenue.

Visiting her yesterday afternoon was Mrs. Rose Barninger, wife of Lieut. Clarence A. Barninger, a Marine Corps officer who was on Wake Island when it succumbed to repeated Japanese assaults. Mrs. Barninger was Miss Ramspeck's host during her stay in Honolulu and left the islands with her in mid-January after the Japanese occupation of Wake Island was officially confirmed.

The two young women sailed on a blacked-out steamer to San Francisco and continued here by motor car. Mrs. Barninger is living with relatives at 4238 Forty-third Street Northwest. She has received no word about her husband's safety since before the attack.

The early morning sound of gunfire on December 7 awoke the pair who commented at the time that "they seem to be practicing rather early." A girl next door then advised them to tune in their radios which told them of the attack. Friends later took them to Kamehameha Heights to watch the battle.

After the attack, a rigid 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. curfew was slapped on Honolulu and all night clubs were closed, Miss Ramspeck said. During curfew hours, only persons with special permits could be out of doors, but civilians became adjusted easily to the new regulations, she said. Blackout regulations were enforced without difficulty because nearly everyone was eager to cooperate, she said.

On December 8, a call was issued for blood donors, and the rush was so great that many persons, including Miss Ramspeck and Mrs. Barninger had to be turned away. The next day, they each donated a pint of blood.

Typical of the spirit of the Navy under fire was a group of sailors who sang "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" while they fed ammunition into their ship's big guns in rhythm, Miss Ramspeck said.

After the attack, authorities started evacuating all persons who were "not essential" to the war effort. Because the two young women did not want to leave, they took temporary jobs in the Air Corps supply office at Hickam Field.

Rep. Ford Asks House Probe OCD 'Glamour Appointments'

tions, struck back at Representative Ford yesterday by calling the California Congressman "irresponsible" and "ill informed."

In his first press conference at OCD, Douglas said he would return to the West Coast next week to make a new picture, but that he would continue his civilian defense work from out there. He revealed he plans to have branch setups in Hollywood and New York and that he hopes to get two or three of his fellow actors to help him out at OCD here.

Especially, he said, would he be glad to get Burgess Meredith, who worked with him in his "Fight for Freedom" activities before America went to war. Helen Gahagan, the wife of Douglas and National Democratic Committeewoman for California, also was active in the committee's work.

Asked why he had not joined the Army if he wanted to help win the war, Douglas replied he had run away from home at the age of 17 to join the World War forces and that he would go again "if they would take me." He declared that he felt the Arts Council has a very definite place in the OCD set-up.

He said that now stage and screen personalities receive innumerable requests for their services and definitely feel the need of some channeling agency to route them to the places they could serve best.

Douglas will be sworn into his new office this morning at 9:30 o'clock. Photographers invited.

Other recent appointments to OCD include Dean James Landis, new executive officer whose salary is $10,000 annually; Jonathan Daniels, editor son of President Roosevelt's former "boss," World War Secretary of Navy Josephus Daniels, who went on the payroll at $8000; Hugh Jackson, New York social work expert, who also makes $8000, and Mary Dublin, formerly with the Tolan Committee, whose salary is $5800. Daniel's father, until recently Ambassador to Mexico, has taken over the editorship of the Daniels newspaper in Raleigh, N. C., since his son has taken the civilian defense job.

Mayor LaGuardia, OCD director, serves free as do also Mrs. Roosevelt, assistant director, and her special office executive, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr. Mrs. Roosevelt is entitled to traveling expenses, but it is not known that she ever has drawn any. It is said that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau "put his foot down against" a salary for Mrs. Morgenthau.

REPRESENTATIVE FORD

Union Funds Pledged, But Not for 'Fan Dancers'

The Central Labor Union's drive to collect $100,000 from members of its affiliated unions for use by District defense authorities passed the $82,000 mark yesterday as 7000 members of the Laborer's District Council pledged a day's pay to the fund (an average of $6.40 a man).

Drive officials pointed out that the money was an outright gift with only one string attached—that the money be spent with the approval of the C. L. U. The string was attached, officials said, to prevent the use of the money to "finance fan dancers." This was a rap at the recent appointment of Movie Star Melvyn Douglas and Dancer Mayris Chaney to the national Office of Civilian Defense staff at big salaries.

Four blood banks for the District to cost $3000 have already been approved. Originally set at $70,000, the drive proved so popular that the quota was raised to $100,000. The Central Labor Union is underwriting all collection expenses.

Hotel Employes Union, Local 781 (cooks, waitresses and waiters), have scheduled a dance at the Wardman Park Hotel for February 15 to raise money for the fund.

Nazis Never Can Conquer Russia, Lost Chance at Smolensk Last July, Czech Military Attache in D. C. Declares

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Hitler will never be able to conquer Russia, Col. Oldrich Spaniel, military attache of the Czechoslovak Legation, told The Washington Post yesterday.

Col. Spaniel, one of the most highly regarded of military authorities along Embassy Row, did not base his statement entirely on what is happening in Russia now—that is, the continuing German retreat across the snow—but rather on what happened around Smolensk in the latter part of last July.

COL. SPANIEL

The failure of the Germans to break through on the central front at that time, Col. Spaniel said, was the big turning point in the Battle of Russia, and made inevitable the subsequent retreat from Moscow, beginning on December 6.

"The Germans' strategy in Russia was an imitation of Napoleon's strategy at Austerlitz," the Czechoslovak expert said. "Napoleon threw all his forces against the central section of the Austrian Army—broke the Austrian defense line in two and rapidly annihilated the two isolated groups.

Maneuver Failed

"The Germans planned to pierce the central front in the general direction of Warsaw-Minsk-Moscow, and through this gap their fast motorized units were to penetrate deeply behind the Russian lines and capture Moscow.

"With the fall of Moscow the entire Russian defense would have been paralyzed. The front would have been broken into two sections. The divided Russian armies would have been isolated from their rich supply bases, because Moscow is the center of communications. The back bone of the Red Army would have been broken."

But, Col. Spaniel said, the Russians knew what was coming and were ready for it. After three weeks the German commanders realized that their blitz in the center had failed, and acknowledged that they were in for a winter campaign. What happened on the wings—around Leningrad and in the Ukraine—could not bring a decision so long as the Russians held Moscow, he asserted.

Hitler, in Col. Spaniel's opinion, must have insisted on the drive toward Moscow long after his generals knew that, with winter coming on, the drive would be a futile one. The Russians, by holding in the center, had won time to strengthen their defenses and also to train the reserves which finally started the Germans reeling on December 6, the day before Pearl Harbor.

Smolensk Stand Hailed

A backward glance over the newspaper files shows that it was on July 27 that S. A. Lozovsky, Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs, hailed the Russian stand around Smolensk and announced triumphantly that "the blitzkrieg is a washout."

What of the future in the Battle of Russia? What will happen when Hitler starts his promised spring offensive?

"The worst is over now," Col. Spaniel said. "The German army will never again be the same. It had reached its peak at the time Hitler attacked in Russia. Never was there such an army before. It was big, its equipment was plentiful. Most important, it was an experienced army, from generals down to privates. It had won every battle. Its spirit was high.

"I don't know what its losses have been in Russia. President Benes said some time ago that von Brauchitsch had conceded that the Germans lost 1,200,000 in killed alone before November. If that was so, the number of Germans killed by now must total 1,500,000. The wounded—including those brought down by the cold—might possibly be three times that many.

"There is much more bad weather ahead in Russia. This will affect the Russians as well as the Germans, although the Germans are not nearly as well prepared for it as the Russians. It is very likely that the Russians will continue to fight and harass the Germans throughout the winter, and thus make it difficult for them to prepare their spring offensive.

"The Germans will have certain advantages when spring comes. They will be able to start an offensive earlier, in April, say, whereas the Yugoslavs held them up last year until June 22. They also will have all of Europe as an arsenal from which to replenish their equipment.

"But in my opinion, 1942 will be a continuation of 1941. The Germans may win victories in Russia, but they will not win the decision. The Russians will continue to wear them down and enfeeble them.

"Some of Hitler's finest regiments have been decimated. The loss of noncommissioned officers must have been tremendous. He also has lost some of his best generals.

Reserves Inexperienced

"The reserves he uses will lack experience. They will also lack that high spirit that pervaded the German army which first attacked Russia. The German army now has tasted defeat. It has suffered heavy losses, and it knows that it is not invincible.

"I would say that the Russians, despite their own heavy losses, will be better prepared in 1942 than they were in 1941. The element of surprise will be missing. The Russian army is now an experienced army, and the officers who are training the reserves are thoroughly familiar with German tactics. There never has been anything to worry about where Russian morale was concerned.

"The question of equipment is a problem, but I believe that the Russian factories—plus help from the United States and Britain—will solve it. It should be remembered, too, that the Russians are very good at repairing damaged equipment."

Col. Spaniel was careful throughout the interview to warn against the potentialities of the German army. It still is, he said, a very powerful army, and one that can be expected to fight until ordered to fight no longer, just as in 1918.

Would Hitler try a pincers movement in the Mediterranean this winter, striking by way of Spain and Turkey?

"I don't know," Col. Spaniel said. "Much probably depends on the situation in Russia. But it is always difficult to know what Hitler's 'intuition' will lead him to do.

"We must be prepared on every front in every country. And, as President Roosevelt says, we must be prepared for a long war. The end might come sooner than we expect, but we can't count on that. We must plan for a long war and trust in our leaders."

Like Col. Vladimir Hurban, the Czechoslovak Minister, Col. Spaniel is a veteran of the World War. He fought with the Czechoslovak army that was brigaded with the Russians until the Russian revolution in 1917. Then he went to France with his battalion and continued the fight there. He later attended the French Military Academy at St. Cyr and the Czechoslovak War College in Prague, where he eventually taught tactics. He was for five years a member of the Czechoslovak general staff. In that position he made a study of the German, Russian and other European armies.

Cripps Spurned Job As Supply Chief

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 5.—The London Daily Mail in a special interview tonight quoted Sir Stafford Cripps, former British Ambassador to Moscow, as saying he had declined to become minister of supply because the post did not carry war cabinet rank and that he preferred to return to the House of Commons "with an open mind."

Cripps had been mentioned prominently as a possible successor to Lord Beaverbrook, who has become minister of war production. Prime Minister Churchill told the Commons today he would clarify Beaverbrook's duties in a statement at the next meeting of the legislative body.

(Editor's note: Here you will find the answers to many of the questions you have been asking about Russia, land of mystery, written for Wide World by Sir Stafford Cripps, former British Ambassador to that country and one of the world's best informed authorities on the subject. The second and final article will appear in The Post tomorrow.)

London, Feb. 5.—In the mass of contradictory propaganda which floods the world in these times of war, everyone is doubtful as to what to believe and what to discard. Let me, therefore, at the commencement give you my view as to the reliability of Russian news.

When fighting is going on along a front of 2000 miles, collection of 100 per cent reliable news is impossible, but it is unimportant whether there is exact accuracy or not.

What we want to know is the principle that is adopted in giving the news.

It may be the principle of the Nazis to make the news fit the momentary needs of propaganda regardless of the facts—or that of making the news as truthful and unexaggerated as safety of armed forces permits.

This latter method which has been adopted by the British government as its principle may lead to many omissions, especially when things are going badly, but it does not lead to exaggeration of success.

It is this latter principle that the Russians have utilized.

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS

It has, indeed, been remarkable and noticeable that accounts of Soviet victories have been restrained in many cases and little or no news been given until it was certain that an operation would be successful or in most cases until it had actually resulted in success.

If you compare the announcements of the Germans as to the capture of towns, always premature and often false, with those of the Russians, you should have no difficulty deciding upon the comparative reliability of the two.

At the present time the Soviet government is most anxious for obvious reasons not to allow any feeling of overconfidence amongst their people to diminish their effort, and for that reason, apart from all others, they do not want to exaggerate their successes.

At my last interview with Kalinin (president of the all-Russian central executive committee), he emphasized this danger of overconfidence.

It is, I think, important in arriving at any evaluation of recent Russian successes to bear the above observations in mind.

The German army is not yet a defeated army, nor has it yet been routed.

It has, however, had to leave a great number of occupied points and towns that it would very much like to have held through the winter. In leaving those towns, it certainly has not been the cold or Russian winter that has forced the evacuation.

The effect of the cold is to make the Germans want to hold on to every house and building that they can, to get protection from the frost.

They are leaving because they are being driven out after hard fighting by the Russians and they are leaving behind them a mass of material that they would dearly like to get away if they could stop long enough to take it with them.

It is an orderly retreat just as was the Russian retreat over the same ground at an earlier date, but it is a forced retreat, and at any moment it might turn into something much worse for the Germans.

The whole question now is one of morale. If the morale of the Germans was to break, the retreat would become a rout.

At present that morale stands, although there are signs it is not as firm as it once was; it is not yet broken and it may well be that the difficulties of winter which affect the Russians as well as the Germans will prevent the retreat from turning into a rout.

Although the Russians have shown that an offensive can be carried out in winter conditions, it is obvious that the speed of any advance must be slowed down by cold and deep snow.

When we come to the consideration of what spring will bring forth, than we embark upon prophecy which is even more dangerous in this war than generally.

Spring in central Russia as a rule begins between the middle and end of March. If there are very heavy snows as there have already been this year, then the thaw will last perhaps two months before the land gets dry and hard once again.

This period of thaw is the most difficult time of all for military operations or any movements of transport.

The Russians will be as much held up as the Germans and, therefore, the position of the rival forces at the end of March will decide the direction of the summer campaign.

They will both have some six weeks to two months in which to make preparations after acute fighting has been stopped by the thaw.

No doubt the Germans will try to gather forces for a fresh push, perhaps in the south against the Caucasus. But by that time the Russians will have still more fresh armies, and all factories they have moved to the east should by then be again in operation.

They have not as great manufacturing resources as the Germans with all the occupied regions of Europe to assist them, but nevertheless, Russian production will have gone up very considerably by spring.

But it is just here that America and Great Britain come right into the picture. We have between us huge manufacturing capacity and must give to the Russians enough armaments to make certain that when the new clash comes in the spring, they are not at a disadvantage. It is up to us to see that the Germans are stopped by efficient machines rather than by inadequately equipped human bodies.

I don't think that the ordinary American or Englishman has the slightest idea of the extent to which the Russian industry has been turned over to war production.

It would not be much of an exaggeration to say the turnover was 100 per cent.

The Russian people are just putting up with it because they know that nothing else stands between them and the overrunning of their country by the brutal hordes of Nazis.

You can buy nothing of ordinary domestic character in Russia today, and people go without cheerfully because they are realists and know that total war demands for total victory a total deprivation of all ordinary comforts, let alone of all luxuries.

We in Britain and America, slowly and very painfully, are learning the same lesson, but we still have a great distance to travel before we reach the Russian standard.

It is not fair for us to enjoy comforts and luxuries and at the same time expect the Russians to fight what is indubitably our battle as well as their own, without those supplies which they could have if we were prepared to give up everything in the way of comforts and luxuries to save Russian lives and bring them speedy success.

It is not a question of depriving ourselves of what we need for our own defense, but of so increasing our production by going without manufactured comforts and luxuries as to get extra production with which to assist Russia.

MICHAEL KALININ

If by our efforts we can make the spring offensive in Europe a decisive success for the Russians, we shall not only save hundreds of thousands of Russian lives, but British and American lives as well.

The Soviet government, I know, is most grateful for what our two countries have done following the Moscow conference in carrying out the promises of Lord Beaverbrook and Mr. Harriman. But can you blame them if they want as much as ever we can spare?

It is vital that we should keep those promised quantities as the minimum since the Soviet government is relying on them for their planning of the coming campaign, and we must not let them down.

But wars not only are fought by materials and weapons—the U. S. S. R. needs our moral support and true friendship just as we need hers.

I know there are difficulties and we shall not help by closing our eyes to those difficulties. History cannot be unwritten and the legacy of past relationships between three countries cannot be got rid of in a day.

The Russians are the most realistic people in the world. They do not close their eyes to the obvious facts of the past, nor can they at once get rid of suspicions which at one time had a sound foundation.

They want, as we want, to know where they stand. Are we temporary friends as a matter of expediency or are we prepared to remold our relations with them on a firmer and better basis for the future?

I will deal with this vitally important question in my tomorrow's article.

Bill Seeks WPB Unit For Small Business

Present Setup Offers Little Fellow No Hope, Senators Say

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A seven-man Senate committee yesterday jointly introduced legislation to create a Small Business Production Division in the War Production Board and a separate Federal agency for expansion and conversion of little factories for munitions manufacture.

The special Small Business Committee flatly told the Senate that the War Production Board, as presently constituted, was unlikely to have a "materially different" regard for small business than the "utterly ruthless" attitude of the now defunct Office of Production Management.

The committee-proposed small business division would be headed by a director who would be a member of the War Production Board. It would be the duty of the division to make a "complete inventory" of the country's war-production facilities and to take all possible steps to obtain maximum small business participation in both the war effort and the civilian economy.

Bankruptcy Threat Seen

The measure would direct the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to organize a Small Defense-Plants Corporation to give little manufacturers financing similar to that now afforded big business.

"Small business enterprise in the United States is facing bankruptcy and chaos along a wide front," the committee declared.

Government procurement officials, including those on the War Production Board, the committee stated, "have made no special effort to distribute beyond the largest business units the contracts they have to dispose of."

"Small business has been neglected because it is easier to neglect it," the report added. "In some cases the fact that procurement officers have always been associated with large business has even made the neglect seem deliberate."

Representation Needed

Centralization of responsibility for war production in a single agency undoubtedly will speed the rearming process, the committee stated, but merely adds to the peril of little business. Effective integration of small business in the war effort will not occur until the small businessman is represented on the production board, the committee said.

Unless help comes to small business men, what is left of them after the war will "be too weak to carry on," the report declared, "and big business, with its branch and chain establishments, backed by its great financial and political power, will move in to occupy the entire field."

The report and the bill were presented to the Senate by Senators Murray (Democrat), of Montana, chairman; Maloney, of Connecticut; Ellender, of Louisiana; Mead, of New York, and Stewart, of Tennessee, Democrats, and Capper, of Kansas, and Taft, of Ohio, Republicans.

Senate Acts

Henderson Approved as Price Chief

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday unanimously approved the President's nomination of Leon Henderson as price administrator after questioning by members of the Senate farm bloc.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, whose amendment to the Price Control Act gave Secretary of Agriculture Wickard dual control with Henderson over farm prices, said the price administrator denied any intention to prevent cotton prices from going to parity.

Farm bloc members recently had Wickard before the Agriculture Committee, alleging that recent Agriculture Department policies caused a break in the price of cotton.

"It was pointed out to Mr. Henderson," said Bankhead, "that the recent announcement that cotton held by the Commodity Credit Corporation would be turned over to other agencies of the Government to be used by the cotton mills in exchange for manufactured goods had caused a drop of more than $5 a bale in the market price of cotton and had reduced the price about that much from the parity level."

Bankhead quoted Henderson as saying that "in his opinion the release of the entire holdings of cotton by the Commodity Credit Corporation would not prevent the price of cotton from going back to parity because of the tremendous demand for cotton goods at this time."

Congress 'Bundles' Drive Off; Funds To Go Into Bonds

Spokane, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Athletic Round Table, giddiest of the country's giddy organizations, turned serious today just as the wildest of its many wild schemes reached a peak. It called off the Bundles for Congress caravan due to leave at noon for Washington.

The $3000 that would have been spent to send the strange cargo of artificial legs, glass eyes and cast-off clothing to "needy" Congressmen was used instead for the purchase of defense bonds.

Under the slogan "keep 'em laughing," the round table last Friday launched its "bundles" campaign to ridicule the pension measure passed by Congress.

From Michigan to Texas and back out to the Pacific, allied campaigns were started.

Statue Stolen at Church Attended by President

Theft of a hand-carved marble statue of Christ from St. "Thomas' Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Church Streets Northwest, was reported to police yesterday.

The Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, pastor of the church which is frequently attended by President Roosevelt, reported the loss, saying it was stolen "some time during the past week" and that it was a gift to the church.

War Housing

Washington's housing picture looks brighter this morning than it has looked at any other time in recent months. At last a sizable construction program appears ready to go forward. The allocation of $18,900,000 for erection of 4500 demountable houses for war workers of low income is particularly heartening because this work can apparently be started immediately. It must be remembered, however, that this dip into the special fund to provide temporary shelter for war workers goes no further than to finance the original program outlined by Housing Coordinator Palmer before Pearl Harbor.

The money allocated yesterday can be used only for demountable housing. It will enable the Alley Dwelling Authority to contribute its share of the 22,000 dwelling units planned as part of the prewar defense program. There is still no certainty that private enterprise will be able to obtain materials to complete its 10,000 units needed to house Government workers of the defense area. Fortunately the RFC is going ahead with its part of the program.

Over and above this defense housing plan the city must have still more living space to accommodate the thousands of war workers now flocking here in response to calls from the Army, Navy and related agencies. There is still an urgent need for prompt enactment of the new Lanham bill carrying 50 million dollars for emergency housing in the metropolitan area of Washington. With this fund an additional 10,000 dwelling units can be provided. Part of the fund will have to be used for new sewers, streets and other utilities to service the new residential areas. In terms of money and number of houses the program seems large. Actually, however, even a grand total of 32,000 units is small in comparison to the current influx of war workers. This requirement must be met as promptly as the demands for guns, ships and ammunition. Nor should there be any lack of enthusiasm in supplying this demand, for houses in Washington will continue to be a valuable asset even when guns and warplanes have been silenced.

Sugar Rations

Under the proposed sugar rationing plan every man, woman and child in the United States will be allowed 12 ounces of sugar weekly. That is a generous allowance that will permit some families to buy more sugar than they customarily consume, though it is less than the average per capita purchases of sugar in normal times. Each registered consumer will be furnished with a booklet of sugar stamps representing at least 3 months' rations. One of these stamps (and one only) will be turned over to the retailer with each weekly 12-ounce purchase. The retailer, in turn, will send the stamps to the wholesaler when he needs to replenish his sugar stocks. This plan will involve very little trouble for the individual consumer. And it will certainly be a boon to harassed retailers who have had to wrestle with the problem of apportioning limited supplies among customers.

As the American Institute of Food Distribution says, the sugar market of the United States has already "lost all semblance of a free market governed by supply and demand and has passed definitely to one of rigid Government control." The Maritime Commission is now allotting shipping space for raw sugar imports. And the imported sugar is being allocated by the Government to domestic refiners. Commercial users of sugar and wholesalers are limited as to the amounts that may be delivered to them in any month. Stocks on hand also have to be reported as a protection against accumulation of excess inventories. With the greater part of the industry subject to such far-reaching controls, the rationing of consumer supplies is simply a logical final step to stabilize the sugar situation, insofar as that is possible.

Existing uncertainties regarding the availability of the Hawaiian sugar crop, submarine sinkings on the Atlantic seaboard, which affect shipments from Cuba and Puerto Rico, limitations of shipping space, and numerous other factors make it impossible to foresee what the sugar situation will be a few months hence. Due to these uncertainties, rigid control over all consumer outlets is required. Otherwise day-to-day rumors would keep the market in a state of perpetual turmoil and encourage hoarding on a grand scale. With the amount of sugar that can be bought at retail fixed by decree, however, direct consumption can be adjusted to changing conditions of supply with comparatively little disturbance. The consumer should, therefore, look upon his sugar stamps as a blessing rather than as a symbol of hardship. For those stamps give him assurance that the sacrifices made necessary by sugar shortages will be borne by all instead of falling with undue severity upon the people who refrained from grabbing and hoarding when everybody else was doing it.

Crying Needs

Without disrespect to either Dr. Landis or Mrs. Roosevelt, we should like to point out that, after nearly two months of war, the civilian defense program in this country has not got beyond its embryonic stage. However, the appointment of Mr. Melvyn Douglas as coordinator of artistic activities and of Miss Mayris Chaney as directress of children's activities in physical fitness, seems to indicate that the true nature of the dangers which threaten our great cities is at last being realized by those in charge of the Office of Civilian Defense. Belated as they are, these appointments represent a valuable beginning. Meanwhile, there are a half dozen other executive jobs of at least equal importance which must be filled, and filled at once, if our civilian population is to have any reasonable feeling of security. We suggest, therefore, the immediate appointment of the following:

(a) A directress of flower arrangement. Well organized and well trained flower arrangement units would be the means of saving countless lives if and when the Japanese should keep their threat to "invade and occupy the United States as far as Washington." The Japanese susceptibility to flowers—especially cherry blooms—is well known. Thus the sight of tastefully arranged flowers might so stir the finer feelings of the Japanese soldiers that they would refrain from using our women and children for bayonet practice.

(b) A thoroughly experienced director or directress of hobby culture. In the event of air raids the thing which must be guarded against above all others is civilian panic. For taking one's mind from one's danger during an air raid there is nothing like a good, absorbing hobby such as, for example, the collecting of rare postage stamps, or of Italian primitives or of Ming pottery.

(c) A director of bluebird song composition. Scientific tests have shown that no other word in the language is so efficacious in its effect on morale as the word "bluebird." Think of the effect on the defenders of Singapore if Gen. Wavell had only written "There'll be bluebirds galore near the Straits of Johore."

(d) A director of quiz programs. Cleverly devised questions, such as, "What's the caliber of a Japanese shogun?" would stimulate us to the acquisition of useful information about the enemy, and thus supplement the work of the Army and Naval intelligence—which, at this writing, appears in some need of being supplemented.

(e) A directress of book discussion and current events panels. The present leadership of the United States in world affairs is due to the fact that, thanks to our indefatigable journalists, we have the best informed public opinion in the world. It is essential that this world leadership be maintained. Groups should be organized at once for the reading and discussion of such books as "Inside Everything," "I Was a Nazi Field Marshal," and so on.

This list, of course, does not even begin to cover the wide field of activity which properly comes within the scope of any well conceived and far-sighted program of civilian defense. We should remember that in this great total and global war we are fighting not merely in defense of our lives and our homes but also in defense of a grand tradition of Western Culture that stretches unbroken from Homer to Hollywood.

Judge Covington

Former Judge J. Harry Covington began his public career nearly 40 years ago as State's attorney for Talbot County, Maryland. His record in that office earned for him a seat in Congress as the representative of the First Maryland District. Once more his record as an astute and conscientious public servant commended him to the people he had been chosen to represent. Twice he was reelected, and he dropped his duties as a legislator only to take up those of a jurist. His outstanding legislative service was the piloting of the Federal Trade Commission Act to passage through the House and the conference committee.

Representative Covington was one of the progressive young Democrats who, in 1912, helped to bring about the nomination of Woodrow Wilson at the Baltimore convention. After the United States entered the first World War President Wilson called upon Mr. Covington to make an extensive survey of labor conditions in the West. His report was influential in formulation of the Government's war labor policy. He also served as a member of the Railroad Wage Commission.

As chief justice of the District Supreme Court, a post to which he was appointed by President Wilson in 1914, Judge Covington made good use of his administrative as well as his judicial talents. During his four years on the bench he was also largely responsible for the reconstruction of the courthouse. After resigning his judicial post in 1918 Judge Covington became one of the leading attorneys in Washington. At present the firm of which he was head is one of the largest and most active among the city's legal group. In private as well as public life he had won wide respect and admiration. His death will be a real loss to many friends and to the community as well.

Tide In Libya

The British tide in Libya has now receded to the point where a very large part of the gains made since the end of November have already been lost. More may be lost before the present Axis offensive is halted. The fact of the matter is, as the Italians themselves admit, that no army can be expected to make a stand between Agedabia and Tobruk. When the British failed to dislodge the Axis forces from Agedabia, when the British fleet, for all its valiant efforts, failed to halt reinforcements from reaching Marshal Rommel and, above all, when the need arose to transfer reserves of men and planes from the Middle East to Burma and Singapore rather than to Libya, the present development, so disheartening from the United Nations' point of view, became inevitable.

It remains to be seen how far Marshal Rommel will be able to exploit his recent gains. He lost a considerable number of men and equipment in his retreat from the Western Desert to Agedabia. It is doubtful whether these losses have altogether been made good by late reinforcements. There are reasons to believe, therefore, that his present venture is much more in the nature of a counter-attack than a full-scale offensive.

We do not know, of course, how much equipment has been lost which the British painfully assembled over a period of months in preparation for the offensive which carried them beyond Bengasi but proved inadequate to enable them to reach Tripoli. If the amount is not excessive, Egypt, Alexandria and the Suez Canal are safe. Yet the United Nations can derive only a limited amount of comfort from any such knowledge. With every available plane, tank and soldier needed in other theaters of the world conflict, the British may now find it advisable to shelve, for some time, any hopes they have hitherto entertained of eliminating the Axis from Libya. They now face the possibility of a new German assault on their positions in the Near East, a possibility which the increasingly furious aerial attack on Malta does much to bring to the fore. And their failure to reach Tripoli and establish a common frontier with the French in Tunisia may have a disturbing effect on the attitude of Vichy and Spain toward the Axis.

Judged by any standard, therefore, the British retreat in Libya must be viewed as a major if thus far inconclusive defeat for the United Nations. It is all the more stunning because of the high hopes which had been built on the westward advance that preceded this retreat and because of the "blood, tears, toil and sweat" which had gone into that abortive effort.

To be sure, the battle between Rommel's advance units and the main body of British and imperial troops has not yet been joined. And while the Axis forces are now beyond Derna, the British are still harassing German and Italian lines in the vicinity of Msus, 125 miles to the southwest of Derna. It is possible, therefore, that the tide of battle which has twice moved swiftly in one direction only to be as swiftly reversed, may turn again. Such a miracle may occur before another stalemate is established on the Libyan front. But it is better not to bank on it.

WILD GEESE

Goose-wedges driving to the north this year
Will swerve from thundering shapes, high in the night
Above old cities—but no longer fear
Vast panoramas of confusing light.

Below them darkness seems to hold its breath—
Then thunder shakes the earth and rocks the skies
And near them whistle particles of death
From points of flame like little evil eyes.

Now men below will hear remembered crying
Of wild geese, in formations still unbroken
Through mist and storm, and think of such wings flying
A chartless vastness . . . as if dreams had spoken.

Sometimes, across the moonlight, men will see
Responding to the punctual unrest
The wedge drive on in faith and urgency—
As passionate as freedom in the breast.

GLENN WARD DRESBACH.

The Pen Is Mightier Than The Sword

Letters To The Editor

Psychological Change

Nothing in the context of the Pearl Harbor report retrieves the prestige lost to Uncle Sam. Its publication forever removes from our language the homely boast, "He sleeps with one eye open and a finger on the trigger of his trusty Colt."

Despite the clear, frank array of incidents, the Roberts report is destined to serve little constructive purpose, unless public reaction to its findings goes beyond the probabilities. It lacks emphasis on the only point that matters—the root cause of the debacle.

The blame for what has happened to our war effort up to date—and which many signs indicate may continue to happen for some time to come—rests on the head of every American. For once it is possible to indict a whole nation. We are all guilty of the belief that this country could not and would not be attacked.

From the highest official down to the humblest citizens a cocksure invincibility complex permeated the Nation until the fateful morning of December 7, and who will say we now have thrown it off? Secretaries Hull, Stimson, Knox and the War Staff were not entirely free from its baneful grip. True, the report reveals they warned the Hawaiian command, but, in the face of what they knew and feared, theirs was an order to be on guard and not the peremptory, "To Your Stations." Surprise over the attack was universal. All official Washington was astounded. That fact is significant evidence of the general state of mind.

Nor is it apparent that the treacherous stroke has wholly shaken our feeling of blissful security. Only yesterday the Senate heard from the mouth of a high officer in the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, "The chances of attack at any time in the near future in strength by air on our cities of the East Coast are rather remote—except an attack in the nature of a stunt." He decried the dissipation of our efforts to prepare for such a contingency.

This testimony illustrates alarmingly the official and public concept of conditions which are to blame for the success of the little "stunt" at Pearl Harbor. This and the fancy that we can defeat any adversary by the sole expedient of increased production—that is, once we get started.

The Robert's report misses fire insofar as it fails to denounce in appropriate terms the effect on our endeavors of these malignant and persistent aberrations. Until a psychological change takes place we are likely to have other such reports. ALBERT A. VOLK.

Radio Advertising

Approximately one-third of the time on the radio is spent in advertising. Naturally, the sponsors of radio programs have obtained the right to advertise as much as they please. But after listening 5 minutes to dull advertising out of every 15-minute program, and sometimes more, the weary listener never wants to see or hear of the mentioned product. If the commercial would merely state that the program is made possible by the certain product and very briefly give the highlights of the same product, the listeners would appreciate it and, in the long run, I believe it would accomplish just as much, and probably more. Several sponsors have become wise and made their commercials in the form of lyrics to play to popular tunes. But then they always have the announcer explain it all just the same. Sponsors, please take a tip, it becomes so monotonous.

Louisiana Wants Parasites

Naturally, nobody wants to be a parasite, in the biological sense of the word. It is a disgrace. I would suggest for all the rich people in Washington to organize a club or an organization and call this organization Parasites, Inc.

Be proud of this organization. Advertise that Parasites, Inc., consists of 100 per cent patriots who have given up their homes temporarily for national defense in order to beat Hitler, Mussolini and the Japs. The temporary sacrifice of Parasites, Inc., will be remembered in the history of the United States.

I would invite the Parasites, Inc., to organize a settlement or reservation in Louisiana, and name this settlement Heaven of Parasites, Inc. Our climate is fine and Louisiana is well known for sports, game and fish. I am sure if Parasites, Inc., would talk to our good Governor, Mr. Jones, he will find some suitable land to sell or rent. Then Parasites, Inc., could build some frame houses, which do not cost very much. Our climate is mild and the houses do not have to be elaborate and of heavy construction. I would suggest apartment houses consisting of three or four room apartments. After the war is over, Parasitec, Inc., can always come to heaven for fishing, duck hunting, football, etc.

A Poor Example

While one of the virtues of a democracy is its tolerance for individuals and groups of varying views, admitting that circumstances alter cases, it would appear obvious and almost axiomatic in war time, that anyone intruding in any place where he did not and could not help in any way, would be a hindrance rather than a help to national defense. Many people, and especially in Washington, are like the rural small town rubes that always hop in their cars, or get on their bicycles, to see if they cannot beat the fire department to the fire.

Curiosity seekers, social parasites, and others neither working in war industries of any kind nor wanting to do so, would get out of the way (if patriotic) and let the limited available space be given to those contributing to the dire needs and welfare of their country in distress.

Some of them should study the sacrifices and "total war efforts" under way in England, Russia and elsewhere, and then, if unable to help, avoid hindering. Examples of various kinds in the National Capital are not conducive to the easiest building up of the best and most enthusiastic support for war activities elsewhere. Country and small town folk give Washington status as the Capital, and the place of abode of the leaders of the country, and assume that the city should set an example to the rest of the country, and the character of that example in many ways, as reflected in numerous reports, is not complimentary to the "all-out" patriotism of all residents of the Capital. Some Washingtonians should go to the "sticks" and learn. F. G. SWANSON.

Telescopic Error

I note in the Post Impressionist column for February 3 an article by Paul H. Oehser in which he makes the statement:

"We knew how Columbus must have felt when, on that Stygian night of October, 1492, he peered through his telescope——" Evidently, Mr. Oehser is unaware that the telescope was not invented until about 1609 (by Galileo).

Mr. Oehser finds himself in good company, for our own Postoffice Department issued a stamp in 1892 commemorating the exploit of Columbus, on which was depicted a scene in which Columbus was shown holding a telescope!

That All May Share

Social welfare is the welfare of society and therefore all the strata in society. It should show no distinction of race, color, creed or social status. The recent infantile paralysis campaign has exemplified these ideals to an appreciable extent yet it has not been as universal as it should. We believe that each and every community in our society should take definite steps to help those less fortunate in their communities because the national program does not reach all such victims of this terrible disease.

Since all of us agree as to the seriousness of the problem, why couldn't the various villages within each county work out some type of program suitable to the needs of its own infantile paralysis victims. The writer knows of a case where one of these unfortunates sought some type of aid and to date, nothing has been done for her. This young lady lives near an industrial area which affords ample opportunity for some type of employment commensurate to her skills and abilities, yet she has been shown no consideration notwithstanding her persistent efforts to secure same.

Would it not be a fitting gesture on the part of local officials to study and devise plans to aid such victims?

Why shouldn't we give all of these less fortunates an opportunity to contribute a part to the general welfare of the society of which they are a part? ALLEN T. BROWN.

Stop Remembering

At no time in the past has the sentiment of Pan-American solidarity been so manifest throughout the nations south of the Rio Grande as it is now. Through the judicious diplomacy of American statesmen, the Latin-Americans have really come to learn that this country earnestly desires the cooperation and friendship of all of the American nations.

It now becomes incumbent upon all Americans to foster this spirit of friendliness, lest the excellent work of American statesmen be vitiated wholly or in part by the people themselves.

May I, therefore, suggest that the reference to the Alamo, in the popular song entitled "Remember Pearl Harbor," is not in the spirit of amity between the people of these countries? One cannot deny that the Alamo was a dastardly deed, perpetrated by the forefathers of America's closest Latin cousins, of which no Mexican today is proud. And, as the people of America have shelved 1776 and all that, is it not fitting today that they also refrain from opening old wounds, and leaving them open, exposed to the filth and infection of insidious Nazi propaganda?

Being myself an alien, not adversely critical, but, on the contrary, extremely well-meaning, I am merely conveying to you an idea which has been prominent in my mind for some weeks.

Needed At Home

I recently left Washington to live in the South for the duration, because I was not working in D. C. and felt that living space was needed for people that were working. I get down here and read every day of the president of the chamber of commerce in some town or somebody else "resigning to go to Washington, where he offered his services." The President's statement brings to mind that all these men are leaving duties at home, where they are of some use, and going to Washington just to "clutter up the place." There are thousands of useless people in D. C. They could go back to their own communities and do the country a greater service by just minding their own business. MRS. M. L. MARLEY.

The Post Impressionist

American China

A century's quest was ended in 1918, when the blind potter, Walter Scott Lenox, of Trenton, N. J., sent to the White House the first complete set of American manufactured dishes that was ever used in the Executive Mansion. The Wilson dishes fulfilled the fondest dreams of American potters, and when the Roosevelts found it necessary in 1934 to buy additional dishes for the mansion, they, too, bought the Lenox Belleek ware that had stood the test of nearly two decades of constant use.

As early as 1818, while Monroe was President, effort was made to equip the President's House and other Government buildings with home manufactured appointments. Monroe tried to find American china of suitable grade for the rebuilt mansion, but was forced to import French porcelain which was given home suggestion by the use of such devices as the emblematic eagle, American flowers and the United States seal.

The search for products of home kilns that could be used on the Presidential table was continued by Presidents Jackson, Polk, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Harrison and Theodore Roosevelt, who had to compromise with imported china decorated with motifs of patriotic suggestion.

The century quest for American-made china for use in the Executive Mansion parallels the struggles of American potters to measure up to the standards of foreign manufacturers. Back of the story of our "state china" is the story of the idealism of an American potter who would never allow a foreign label to be placed on his dishes to help make a sale and from whose factory no "seconds" were ever sold.

Walter Scott Lenox was an apprentice in a New Jersey ceramics factory at the time President Grant was trying to place an order with an American firm for the largest set of dishes that had even been bought for the White House. The failure of American kilns to meet the challenge of the hour made a deep impression on the apprentice boy who was working all day long in the factory and studying design at night.

When he had served his term, learning the many phases of the ceramics trade, Lenox finally secured financial backers to help build his own factory. His one ambition was to create an excellent type of American china that would have no foreign superior.

Lenox's friends urged him to do as other American manufacturers were doing and manufacture a cheap coarse china that would meet a ready home demand. "People with money will always order their best china from Europe," he was told over and over.

"My china is going to be as fine as any they can buy in Europe," Lenox would answer proudly.

There were long years of heartbreaking struggle but Lenox never wavered in his determination. Sickness, lameness, not even blindness weakened his purpose. After a long illness, he was left almost helpless. His sight was gone, and he could visit his factory only in a wheel chair and "watch" the output of his factory with his fingertips.

But the financial breakers had receded and his factory was making china that matched the best the importers could display. Then came the White House order which was the high water mark of the blind potter's career. Soon after the order was filled Lenox died.

The type of china that was used to fill President Wilson's order is called Belleek ware. It is similar to a very thin translucent porcelain of ivory tint that was once made in Belleek, Ireland. Sometimes it is referred to as "egg shell china," so thin is it that it is transparent, yet so strong that it has been among the most durable of all porcelains. Lenox perfected this type and produced one of the strongest and most durable vitrified porcelains known in the ceramics industry.

In 1934 President Roosevelt ordered another set of Lenox china to supplement the Wilson dishes. They are of the same ivory and cream body, thin and translucent, with the President's seal and other decorative motifs etched in 24-carat gold. Slight changes were made in the ornamental design. The Roosevelt dishes have a narrow border made up of features of the family coat-of-arms—three roses alternating with three ostrich feathers. The only touch of color on the Wilson dishes was a wide band of cobalt blue on the service plates. The Roosevelt dishes have a narrow band of this blue, studded with stars on each dish.

In a room in the east wing of the White House, there is a permanent exhibit of dishes used in the various Presidential administrations. Aside from its historical interest, this miscellaneous assortment of pottery specimens affords an interesting glimpse into the evolution of the oldest of all industrial arts. The origin of the making of pottery is lost in antiquity, as is the potter's wheel, the oldest mechanical device made by man.

The later stages of the refinement of crude pottery into porcelain furnishes a story full of exciting romance. Its progressive discoveries were the result of long, patient and often tragic episodes. There comes to mind Palissy, struggling like a madman for 16 years for the discovery of enamel; in his extremity, tearing the doors from the house and using what was left of his furniture to fire his kiln—a frenzied effort that was at last crowned with success. And Bottger, alchemist to Augustus II of Saxony, who, failing in his boasted promise of turning base metals into gold, was in danger of losing his life, because of the extreme anger of a disappointed king. In his extremity Bottger turned his attention toward the manufacture of porcelain, a problem that was consuming the ingenuity of the potters of the day, who not having the Chinese ingredient kaolin, had been unsuccessful, after years of fruitless work, in producing hard paste china. The alchemist was as unsuccessful in discovering the coveted formula as he had been in producing gold. Instead of discovering the secret of its manufacture, however, he discovered the precious material itself right on the top of his head! Barbers were then using a heavy white powder to weight their wigs, and this powder revolutionized the pottery industry of Europe, making possible the manufacture of true porcelain.

Both Sides Rush Reinforcements

IN FOOTBALL measurements, our team is on the 1-yard line in Malaya, about the 10-yard line in the East Indies, and about the 25-yard line in Burma. On each of these fields our opponent still has several times the number of players we have. Both sides are throwing in more men, but theirs have a shorter distance to go.

LINDLEY

The British, as this is written, have not lost hope of holding Singapore. It can still be reinforced by sea, although only at the risk of heavy losses from air attack. Singapore may become another Tobruk, but unlike Tobruk it has a large civilian population—some 700,000 who probably include some fifth columnists and a far larger number whose behavior under severe and persistent air attacks may not be cool and orderly. Large stocks of food are believed to have been assembled, but some of them may be destroyed by Japanese incendiary and explosive bombs. However, the water supply problem is simpler than Hongkong's, owing to numerous catch-basins and frequent rains. Most of the big guns defending Singapore point toward the sea, but 8-inch railway guns and lighter artillery and machine guns are available to block a Japanese crossing of the narrow Straits of Johore.

The Japanese advance toward Rangoon is regarded in informed circles with considerably anxiety. The terrain is difficult, and veteran Chinese troops have been moved into Burma (in undisclosed numbers). Rangoon can be reinforced with much less risk of loss than Singapore can. More airplanes are the paramount need. If the United Nations can get approximate parity in the air in this area it is believed that they can hold the Japanese at a safe distance. The chances of achieving this parity in fairly short order are considered good, especially if the British are employing one or more fast-moving aircraft carriers to ferry planes from the Middle East. These valuable craft are in less jeopardy if sent to Rangoon than if sent to Singapore.

ON THE LONG line of the East Indies the Japanese are already in a position to harass the sea route from the United States and Australia, and to strike heavily by air at Surabaya, the chief Dutch naval base. Although not comparable to Singapore, this base is equipped to handle cruisers, destroyers, submarines and other light craft. If it is made useless by battering from the air, the naval forces of the United Nations in the South Pacific will have to fall back on Brisbane and Sydney, Australia, some 3000 miles away. Port Darwin, on the northern coast of Australia, is not yet well developed although of use as a fueling station. Planes shipped from the United States could be unloaded at Brisbane, assembled, and flown to Port Darwin. Where they could be flown beyond that would depend on their range and whether the Japanese had captured the air fields between Darwin and Java, citadel of the East Indies.

Meanwhile, by reaching out to New Guinea, the Bismarck and Solomon Islands, etc., the Japanese are getting within striking range of our Pacific route to Australia—not only through the Torres Straits to Darwin and the East Indies, but to the main ports in southeastern Australia. Another leap or two to the Fijis or New Caledonia would put them athwart the latter routes.

THE NEXT very few weeks—perhaps not more than a month—will decide the fate of the southwest Pacific, according to the prevailing view of experts. Substantial reinforcements are on the way. Some have reached Singapore, probably Rangoon, and probably Australia, if not the East Indies. The most urgent need is for airplanes, to defend the bases still in the hands of the United Nations against air attack, to damage or destroy Japanese convoys bearing invasion forces, and so hit air fields from which the Japanese can launch large-scale attacks on such important targets as Surabaya, Port Darwin, and the sea lanes over which additional reinforcements can be moved from the United States. Then, to make the southwest Pacific line secure, a number of air fields already lost to the Japanese will have to be recaptured.

The Japanese are racing against time. If they win the race, the war will be longer and perhaps infinitely more difficult. If they fail, February or March, 1942, may be marked down as the turning point in the Pacific war, even though the United Nations' counter-offensive, intended to bring a final crushing victory, is not launched until 1943.

Fair Enough

Decline Of Congress

SOME WAG in Spokane has started a campaign of ridicule against those members of both houses of Congress who voted for pensions for members of the National Legislature. Under the slogan, "Bundles for Congressmen," a growing number of sillies are collecting old clothes, plug hats, hot-water bottles and Christmas slippers to be sent to Washington with the contempt of the donors.

In Washington, Jim Mead, a Senator from New York, a New Dealer and the complacent colleague of the author of the vicious Wagner Act, has promptly responded with complaint that this movement will hold up to prolonged ridicule the popular branch of Government and create serious disrespect for the legislative body.

Senator Mead is right, but he ignores the true reason for this contempt and distrust and probably underestimates the depth of this feeling among the people. The pension law is a trifle of itself. The real reason why Congress, on both sides, has fallen in the public opinion is that the people's representatives have been found guilty of a wicked and cowardly sell-out to a small group of bad men in command of a very small minority of the whole American people, whereby all the people are faced with the proposition that they must surrender one of their most important rights of citizenship to the bosses of the C. I. O. and the A. F. L.

THE EVIL Wagner Act, a slimy lie in its very title, has never been amended, notwithstanding thousands of cases of individual and mass persecution of the people by power-hungry criminals, Communists and Fascists in command of the union movement. The iniquity of this law and of its administration has been proved publicly and notoriously in Congress and out, and its meaning to the ostensibly free citizen has at last become clear to him. The citizen has begun to understand that he has been betrayed into the power of a few mouthy and arrogant and utterly brutal mob leaders who will beat his head off with stakes and bats in the hands of their Brown Shirts unless he pays tribute and taxes to private organizations having no legal or moral right to intervene between the worker and his lawful occupation.

He has seen that shameless body of which Senator Mead has the doubtful honor to be a member permit the creation of an agency which even intervenes between him and his Government, has seen the Government defer to these criminals with the mocking explanation that they represent "labor" and has watched with increasing disgust, cynicism and despair the steady refusal of Congress to risk the political wrath of the Brown Shirt leaders by passing laws which would curtail their power.

This is no overestimate of the perfidy of the offense in which Senator Mead has a full share of moral and political guilt, nor does he exaggerate the seriousness of this popular reaction against Congress.

THERE IS no longer any pretense that the evils of the Wagner Act are imaginary; that the vast documentary proof of persecution is incorrect or that there is any distortion in the picture which shows the people handed over in chains to low and brutal men with boundless political ambitions, shut off from the courts of law and denied relief by the bench and Congress.

Felix Frankfurter's decision in one key case, that of the carpenters in St. Louis, positively established the right of scoundrels of the lowest type to commit acts against the rights of clean citizens which, done by any individual outside this privileged class, would be properly regarded as violations of law and decency and punished without hesitation. Congress permitted Justice Frankfurter and his colleagues of that majority to put this intention into laws which Congress passed with no such intention and has had not even the civic decency, much less the political courage, to deliver to these adventurers the public rebuke which their shocking dictum deserved.

Senator Mead is right as far as he goes. Congress is in contempt, but he is either too ignorant to perceive the real reason or too sly to admit it. If he will look in the mirror he will see one of the most influential authors of the dangerous decline of the popular branch of the American Government in the mind of a people who have almost given up but may express a last hope the next time he and his partners in this betrayal come up for reelection.

Our Two Fronts

By Mark Sullivan

Split Efforts Meet Axis Offensives

IN THE FIRST week of February, the United States and Great Britain are on the defensive at every point where they come in contact with the Axis. The United States is on the defensive in the Philippines. The British are on the defensive both at Singapore and in North Africa.

SULLIVAN

Besides, Britain and the United States, especially the latter, are in a position against which military experts have always warned, which we were on guard against and tried to avoid. We are operating in two oceans at once. We are resisting the two ends of a gigantic Axis pincers—the Japanese end in the southwest Pacific, the German end in the eastern Atlantic. We are suffering, in an active and costly way, the handicap inherent in such a situation. We are dividing our effort—sending reinforcements westward toward the Pacific arena, and at the same time sending men and materials eastward to the British Isles and North Africa. In the same way, the British are obliged to divide their effort. They are sending reinforcements to North Africa against the Germans and Italians, and at the same time to the southwest Pacific against the Japanese.

At all these points of contact, the United States and Britain are on the defensive—it is the enemy that has the initiative.

ONLY BY adding Russia to the picture does it become less gloomy. Where Russia and Germany come in contact, it is Germany that is on the defensive. Not only is Russia driving Germany back. It is probable that Russia, by the force and persistence of her attack, has so engaged Germany as to render the latter unable to make a winter or spring drive elsewhere. Had Germany been able to hold her front in Russia, it is likely she would have struck against the British, either directly on the British Isles or in North Africa, or indirectly through Turkey or elsewhere in the Mediterranean.

Probably it is now too late for such a drive. If Russia has prevented it, then Russia has made an immense contribution. Had Germany been able to make a full dress drive against Britain during the winter and spring, Britain might have lost North Africa, and certainly would have been unable to send reinforcements to Singapore.

Whether Germany intended to make a winter drive against Britain, and was only prevented by the unexpected strength of Russia, cannot be known until years from now. It seems probable she had the intention; and probable that her intended drive against Britain was meant to synchronize with the Japanese attack on the British and Americans. At the time Japan made the attack, December 7, Hitler may still have been under the illusion that he could hold the Russians readily, and divert much of his strength to an attack upon Britain coinciding with the Japanese one. On the day of the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor, and for weeks after, military experts watched, expectantly, for corresponding action by the Germans in the eastern Atlantic.

IF WE and Britain have been saved from a drive by Germany coinciding with the Japanese one, we have been fortunate and should be grateful. As it is, the situation of our two nations is uncomfortable. Thanks to Russia, the situation of Britain as against Germany is not so serious. Any possibility of Germany either attacking Britain directly, or completely overrunning Africa, must now be postponed until Germany does whatever she is able to do with Russia. It is apparent Hitler must now reassemble all his strength for a drive against Russia after winter passes. Until after that, and dependent upon the outcome of that, Britain seems safe from any concentrated attack.

In the southwest Pacific, however, the situation is acutely tense for both ourselves and Britain. Japan, up to this moment, has the initiative, and is having steady success. If she captures the Philippines, Singapore, and all the Dutch East Indies, worse will follow. From the vantage ground in which she would then be, she could take steps extremely damaging to the United Nations. She could stop supplies going to China by way of the Burma Road. She could take Burma. In Burma, she would be, in the classic phrase, an arrow pointed toward India. She would be—except for what opposition could remain in China—well on the way toward her dream of dominating and organizing the some 800 millions who compose the yellow and brown races.

WHETHER Japan can succeed will be determined in a few weeks or months. To prevent her from succeeding justifies the most desperate speed on our part. The difference between resisting Japan now, and attacking her after she becomes entrenchd, is enormous. To oust an entrenched Japan would require years of the utmost effort by the United States and Britain.

As against the seriousness of the present situation, certain deeply fundamental conditions are assuring. Nothing that has happened in the war so far has impaired in any degree the fighting force of Britain, in men, materials and organization; rather, she is better equipped today than at any time since the war began. As for the United States, we are only a small fraction on our way toward achieving our maximum power. And we are gathering momentum at a speed that few realize.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Labor's Problem

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 5.—Increasing the Nation's industrial output and settlement of labor disputes is voted by both labor union leaders and labor union members the most important problem which organized labor must solve in the next few months.

In a special intensive poll of labor union sentiment conducted among 1000 local labor leaders in 82 industrial centers and among a cross-section of the labor union rank and file in the same 82 areas, the American Institute of Public Opinion put this issue to a vote:

"What do you consider the most important problem that organized labor must solve in the next few months?"

The chief problems named by the labor union leaders and by the rank and file are as follows:

	Union Leaders	Union Members
Increased production of war materials and settlement of disputes between labor and capital in order to win the war	54%	48%
Achieving unity within labor	15	14
Combating restrictive labor legislation	12	5
Unemployment due to industry's changing over to war basis	8	7
Wage adjustments to fit cost of living	5	6
Organize more workers into unions	7	4
Get radicals and racketeers out of unions	1	3

The desire to see disputes between union and management settled in such a way as to get on with the war was particularly prevalent among union rank and file members.

One in every five members interviewed said that the most important thing for labor to achieve was settlement of disputes "in a spirit of unselfishness" to keep industry going at top-notch speed.

"Stop Fussing Around"

The viewpoint of the rank and file is typified in the following comments from individual members interviewed in the survey:

"We must get behind the President and produce without fighting over small, unimportant things."—A. F. of L. motion picture operator, Elizabeth, N. J.

"We've got to quit all this fussing around and get to work."—A. F. of L. streetcar motorman, Oakland, Calif.

"We must be ready to sacrifice everything to win the war."—C. I. O. textile worker, Paterson, N. J.

The viewpoint of the local union leaders is shown in the following:

"We've got to make sure production of war equipment and successful prosecution of the war go forward without a hitch."—C. I. O. organizer, Oakland, Calif.

"Let's forget our disputes and keep shoulders to the wheel, especially in war factories."—Business agent, A. F. L. building trades union, Louisville, Ky.

"Dictatorship" Favored

Although many labor union leaders and members are strongly opposed to restrictive labor control in the form of permanent legislation, nevertheless the willingness of the majority to accept Government administrative dictation for the duration of the war is revealed in another question asked in the Institute survey.

The issue put to them was:

"In time of war, should the Government have the right to tell workers what jobs they are to work at, what they will be paid and how many hours they shall work?"

The same question was likewise put to the general public in a recent Institute study. It is interesting to compare the attitude of local labor union leaders, labor union rank and file and the public as a whole.

	Union Leaders	Union Members
Yes	55%	58%
No	30	29
Qualified and no opinion	15	13
General Public
Yes	67%
No	22
Qualified and no opinion	11

Our True Frontier

By Barnet Nover

The Dangers Of Defense Psychology

ACCORDING to the geography books the United States is bounded on the east by the Atlantic, on the west by the Pacific. That is no longer true. It ceased being true, at the very latest, on December 7, 1941.

NOVER

On that day our frontiers were suddenly moved west as far as Tibet and India, east as far as the great Russian battle line, the blue waters of the Mediterranean and the desert wastes of Libya.

The victories won by the Russians, the Chinese and the British in the two months since December 7 have been our victories, too. Any defeat inflicted on any of the United Nations, whether in Libya or Malaya or Burma, whether at Hongkong or Sarawak or Celebes, have been defeats for us.

THIS POINT requires no laboring. Intellectually the American people now realize that the war is one war, that the fate of each of the United Nations is bound up with the fate of all. Emotionally we continue to divide the war into compartments. From a practical point of view we continue to permit the illusions of political geography to interfere with the realities of military strategy.

From the very beginning of the fighting in the Pacific the United Nations' forces have suffered from a grave inferiority in planes, man power and equipment and, because of Pearl Harbor and the loss of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, from an inferiority in sea power as well. But the fact that the Japanese have possessed superiority in the air at every crucial point and on every cruicial occasion has been beyond everything the great determinant.

That is why despite presumably heavy losses they have continued to push downward and outward to the point where today they are menacing not only Singapore but also Rangoon and the Burma Road, Batavia and the Dutch East Indies and even the continent of Australia.

THESE REMARKABLE successes have brought about a sudden and drastic revision of past calculations regarding Japan's strength on land, in the air and at sea. Having underestimated Japan's capacity to wage an all-out war, there is now danger that Japan's strength will be overestimated.

It is doubtful, for instance, whether the total man power which Japan has been employing in all theaters of the Pacific war, outside of China, amounts to much over 500,000 men. That is certainly not beyond the capacity of the United Nations to match. But man power is not half as essential, at the present time, as air power.

It has been estimated by those in a position to know that if the United Nations possessed an additional 2000 planes in the Far East they would enjoy superiority over the Japanese in every theater of the Pacific War.

Even a thousand planes, just a part of our monthly production, might be sufficient to enable the Allies at least to fight a successful defensive action until adequate reinforcements can be sent to Singapore, Burma, the Dutch East Indies and Australia.

THE JOB of getting a thousand planes and the men to fly them to the points where they are needed and where they can do the most good is not to be minimized. Distances in the Pacific are tremendous and shipping is limited. Furthermore, we cannot afford to neglect our commitments to Russia, which needs planes and other supplies not only to continue her westward march but also to prepare for an all-out assault by Germany (probably aided by Japan) in the spring.

Nonetheless the question can reasonably be asked whether we have done everything that could have been done since December 7 to rush reinforcements to the Far East, whether we have not been impeded in this necessary effort by a hangover of defense psychology.

Since December 7 American cities on the East and West Coasts have had facing them the possibility of air raids.

Such a possibility can no longer be dismissed as fantastic. Japanese planes have been raiding points in New Guinea that are more than 3000 miles removed from Japan, much farther than is the west coast of Europe from the East Coast of the United States. Yet it would be a tragic circumstance if, in anticipation of such raids on American centers by Axis bombers, we keep so large a part of our available air power at home that through insufficient air power we lose the Pacific.

UNTIL OUR production reaches the point where we are in a position to take care of all our needs we shall remain in the position of having to make difficult choices.

We shall not only have to decide what portion of our production is to be allocated to Russia, to China, to Australia, the Dutch East Indies, Egypt, etc., but also to chose between keeping sufficient strength at home to take care of all eventualities, even the most remote, and using our existing strength where it will do the most good, even if it means reducing the protection now possible for continental United States.

Yet the best protection we can have at home is to right the balance now operating against us in the Pacific, while keeping Hitler occupied in Russia.

We must regard the defense of Burma, at this particular juncture, as even more important, since it is in greater danger, than the defense of California. To weaken the air defenses of Washington and New York would be a fully worthwhile gamble if it could mean saving Singapore, or Batavia, or Australia.

Wherever the fight is, there is our frontier, there can we best defend ourselves.

Food Seized, Greeks Starve

By the Associated Press

Greece is suffering a terrible famine, reports reaching Washington indicate, and the situation in that Axis-occupied country is growing more desperate daily.

At a press conference yesterday Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, described the plight of the Greeks as utterly appalling. He said the State Department had been receiving famine reports from there for some time, from Americans returning from Greece or neighboring countries and from the Greek government through the Greek Legation here.

Welles said the department's information indicated that the Germans had ruthlessly stripped the Greek people of their food reserves and left them to starve. He added that the rapidly increasing death rate among infants was particularly shocking.

Asked if he thought a recently reported British decision to send food relief into Greece through the Turkish Crescent (Turkish Red Cross) might alleviate the situation, Welles replied he certainly hoped it would.

Reports from Greek and neutral sources recently have told that the hunger-weakened people are dying by hundreds in Athens alone, with similar distress in other Greek cities. Bread is unobtainable at any price in some districts, and the supply of fish from the waters around Greece is so far from adequate, according to these reports, that even the heads and entrails of fish—formerly used for fertilizer—are eagerly sought as food.

Subdraft Age Training Urged

A plan to select and train certain men below the draft age so that their special talents may be used to the maximum in the war effort has been proposed by the National Education Association of the United States.

It is set forth in a new publication, "A War Policy for American Schools." Dismissing the idea of "education as usual," the commission recommends 11 priorities which "should be given absolute and immediate priority in time, attention, personnel and funds over any and all other activities."

Among these priorities are training workers for war industries, producing materials and services needed for the war, helping to raise funds to finance the war, protecting school children and property against attack, and maintaining strong morale and loyalty.

It calls for setting up special boards, following the selective service principle, with some competent public authority, possibly the high school principal, to select about 10 per cent of the total number of young men in a school who show indications of special talent.

These men would be classified in a reserve category and placed under the control of the special boards to which Army and Navy officers would be attached. According to the plan the boards would have the power to allocate the men for service as enlisted men, officers' training corps, or further school training. The commission recommends that the Federal Government provide the funds for the proposal.

Bill Offered to Repeal Auto Use Tax July 1

A bill to repeal the automobile use tax after next July 1, when the current stickers expire, was introduced yesterday by Representative Landis (Republican), of Indiana.

Landis, in a statement, described the levy a nuisance tax and declared it "objectionable" on the grounds that "the auto is not a luxury. Owners of small and old passenger cars must pay the same amount ($5 a year) as do owners of large limousines and luxurious yachts. The sticker system is very unsatisfactory because many of them will be destroyed, lost or stolen."

Soldier Writes In Nazi Paper Of 'Days Of Hopelessness'

By the Associated Press

At the German Frontier, Feb. 5.—Days without sun . . . days of never-ending snow and piercing cold . . . "many days of hopelessness" . . . days deep in the forests . . . days of howling blizzards sweeping over the frozen plains.

That is the "vision of a German soldier," as it was written by a Nazi trooper somewhere in Russia and published in the Nazi army's Eastern Front newspaper.

Scandinavians would say that this unidentified German soldier is a victim of "Northern sickness"—the name they apply to the malady that comes of living too long away from cities, deep in the woods removed from the life of family and community.

As recorded here from a German broadcast, the soldier wrote:

"When we see all the destruction, all the pains of this war of two worlds; when snow covers the endless wastes of the Russian territories with its white blanket—then we think of the future, of our homes, and of a better world . . . .

"In France everything was different. The French were a tired people, overthrown within a few weeks by our ardent fighters. All this was easy, simple, self-evident.

"But since we have been marching in Russia we have had many days of hopelessness—not that all became hopeless; but that this dreary feeling has walked with us and besides us as a constant comrade.

"These eastern plains are strange and monotonous. . . .

"Death lurks everywhere in the forests and swamps. Like a ferocious beast the enemy lurks in the woods. The Russian forests in no way can be compared with our German forests, for in Russia the trees and underbrush grow densely and marching becomes a constant battle against swamps and trees and sand.

"Then there are days and days when the rain pours down without end. The trenches are knee-deep in water and everything is full of dirt and slime.

"There, where the fighting is merciless, we often have asked ourselves, 'Is this still to be called war?'

"We have seen terrible sights—the destruction of homes, people burned, cattle wandering aimlessly.

Straus Formally Resigns Post As USHA Post

By the Associated Press

Nathan Straus yesterday formally gave up the job as administrator of the United States Housing Authority.

Before an assembly of approximately 1200 USHA Washington employes in the Interior Department auditorium, he announced he had submitted his resignation to the President and had called the employes together to say "goodby." The President has not accepted the resignation, but Straus expressed confidence he would.

The employes presented Straus a scroll, which said in part:

"You are leaving behind you a record of concrete accomplishment."

Leon H. Keyserling now is serving as acting administrator. He previously has served as secretary to Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, and as deputy administrator and general counsel of USHA.

Army's Needs To Exceed Entire U. S. Wool Clip

Demands of the Army alone will exceed the entire country's domestic wool clip next year, a high War Production Board official declared last night, warning that wool for civilian clothing will have to be drastically reduced.

R. R. Guthrie, chief of the WPB textile and clothing branch, told the woolen and worsted industry at a meeting of its advisory committee that the WPB will soon determine how much new wool is to be used in the cloth for men's, women's and children's garments, and advised of substitute materials.

The use of new wool, and its admixtures, will be covered by extensive rulings, Guthrie indicated, to make sure that there will be enough yardage of warm cloth for the civilian population.

Comparison of Broadcasts Shows Crude Axis Attempts to Split Allies, MacLeish Reports

A "Borgia Bund" of enemy radio propagandists is using a "shabby but subtle system of playing both ends against the middle" in an attempt to poison the minds of the United Nations against each other, Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, warned last night.

In an analysis of Axis shortwave radio propaganda broadcasts, MacLeish said that the Nazis, Japanese and Italians were pouring out a "brand new concoction of lies." The campaign, he said, is as "shrewd, as ruthless, as any poison plot of the Borgias."

The OFF report, its director stated, was based on a factual study of enemy short-wave propaganda, which has been monitored by the Federal Communications Commission. The strategy uncovered, he explained, takes the form of "exaggerations, distortions and outrageous lies" and is based on the precept of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" that "the great masses of the people . . . are more easily victimized by a large than a small lie."

Quotations Cited

As a typical example of the strategy "to divide country from country among the United Nations, race from race, religion from religion," MacLeish cited a recent broadcast aimed at the United States, which declared:

"The American foreign policy is dictated from Downing Street rather than from Washington, and will leave America holding the bag."

But to the British, the Axis broadcasts took the line:

"The British Empire is dissolving like a lump of sugar into Roosevelt's tea cup."

The Berlin radio, the OFF report said, has recently charged that the landing of American troops in Northern Ireland was timed "to coincide with Roosevelt's gradual absorption of Australia and Canada." During the Pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro, enemy stations tried the same tactics in an attempt to disrupt the harmony of the American republics, the OFF director said. The theme of the broadcasts was "imperialistic designs" of this country.

Those Abusive Italians

MacLeish noted that the Italian radio was "particularly abusive," in portraying "Protestant Roosevelt" in an alliance with "Atheist Stalin" attacking "Catholic Fascism." One fabrication, which the Vatican promptly denied, was that the Pope urged South American nations not to break off relations with the Axis.

Another concoction of the Rome radio, beamed toward Latin America during the Rio conference, was:

"A noted North American gang leader accepted a recruit at once when the applicant stated that his experience-record included work for the FBI, for Mayor LaGuardia, Secretary Morgenthau, and lately for Sumner Welles. Cried the gang leader, 'That's enough! You have just the qualifications for a successful gangster.'"

Turkey Gets Attention

The Japanese radio, MacLeish declared, seems to be "a little sensitive" about the treachery at Pearl Harbor, inasmuch as its favorite is the "nobility and high honor of the Jap soldier."

The report noted that at present the Axis radio is paying particular attention to Turkey, in an effort to destroy its confidence in the United Nations.

MacLeish said:

"Shortly after the visit of British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden to Moscow, the Nazi radio made up the story that he had agreed that Russia should have the Dardanelles. The Turkish government investigated and found the report to be false, whereupon the German propaganda chiefs offered the alibi that they had been misled by a British news agency. That story, too, was investigated and found to be false."

Gen. Summerall Ill

Charleston, S. C., Feb. 5 (AP).—Gen. Charles B. Summerall, former chief of staff of the Army and for the last ten years president of The Citadel here, was reported to be ill today but associates said his condition was not considered serious. Gen. Summerall is 75 years old.

Dead Pilot's Verse Going On Display

JOHN MAGEE

The work of John G. Magee, jr., 19, a young Washington poet who died in action with the Royal Canadian Air Force over enemy territory last December, will go on exhibition today in the Library of Congress along with other "Poems of Faith and Freedom," including manuscripts by Shelley, Burns, Longfellow and Whitman.

Archibald MacLeish, Librarian, announced that the exhibition features two manuscripts loaned by Magee's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. John G. Magee, sr., of 2118 Bancroft Place Northwest. One of these is the sonnet, "High Flight," written shortly before his death which was published in many newspapers in this country and Canada.

The other poem is a 16-line poem, probably his last, as yet unpublished. It is entitled, "Per Ardua," a phrase taken from the motto of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and is dedicated to his companions who perished in the Battle of Briton.

The poem "High Flight" is to be placed in all pilot training centers of the British Empire, it was learned. The family granted permission for this last week. The Rev. and Mrs. Magee recently received letters of consolation from Winston Churchill and King George VI, it was said.

Also in the exhibition, it was stated, is a photostat of the first draft of Rupert Brooke's sonnet, "The Soldier," and the first printing, in Punch of Col. John McCrae's rondeau, "In Flanders Fields."

The letter from the King said in part, "We pray that the empire's gratitude for a life so nobly given in its services may bring you some measure of consolation."

British Sub Lost; Sank 13 Axis Ships

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 5.—The admiralty today disclosed that Britain had lost one of her most famous submarine raiders, the Triumph.

The Triumph, a 1090-ton patrol type submarine carrying a normal crew of 53 men, was lost after sinking four Axis naval units, including a U-boat, and nine Axis supply ships in a "succession of successful patrols" in the Mediterraneon. The vessel also was credited officially with having "probably" sunk an armed trawler, a cruiser, a supply ship and a tanker.

Nazis 'Frantic' For Workers, Briton Finds

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Feb. 5.—The recent call-up of two million men into the German army and the inability of skilled workers now serving in the forces to return to German factories from the battle fronts for a "creative pause" as they have done the last two winters has caused the Nazis to launch a "frantic drive" for labor throughout Europe, a British government official said today.

So acute is the shortage that German women between the ages of 30 and 45 have been conscripted and reports have reached London that women in the occupied countries may soon be sent to Germany.

Although the Nazis are draining the occupied countries of all types of workers and are driving factories in those countries to greater efforts, the official said, German war production will never reach the peak it attained in May, 1941.

"Numerically, the Germans may seem to be well off, but sabotage, poor food and fatigue will continue to take a heavy toll and in my opinion the May period will never be reached again," he continued.

For the first time since the outbreak of war the Germans have been forced to transfer the entire personnel of certain French motor car factories to Germany to repair aircraft and motorized equipment, he said.

The lot of the transplanted worker generally is an unhappy one. Usually they are kept in barracks, must work 10 to 12 hours a day, subject to many penalties and restrictions and often are marched to the factory under armed guard.

Although forced to post a heavy bond to assure their return on the rare occasions when they are granted home leave, the official said hundreds had forfeited their bonds rather than return.

The death rate is "exceptionally high" because they must work in areas that most often are visited by Royal Air Force bombers.

Japs Attack U. S. Hospital Ship 9 Times in Afternoon

Melbourne, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—An American Red Cross hospital ship carrying wounded United States troops from the Philippines to Australia was attacked by Japanese planes nine times between noon and dusk on January 8, nurses and passengers arriving at an Australian port said today.

(The ship probably is the 2067-ton steamer Mactan, which was chartered by the Red Cross in Manila and was reported to have reached Australia safely on January 15. The Red Cross said in Washington that the Mactan was the only vessel it had chartered in the Pacific.)

"Fighters and bombers came over like swarms of flies, but we were all cheerful," said one of the wounded. "We all only wished that we were back on our feet so we could have another crack at the Japs."

U. S. Pilot Missing On Flight Over Venezuela Jungle

Caracas, Venezuela, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Jimmy Angel, adventurous American jungle flier, was missing today on a flight over the steaming wilderness near the Venezuela-Brazil border where he once claimed to have discovered a fabulous "land of gold."

Angel was 48 hours overdue on a flight from Canaracuni to Venetuari, both near the Brazilian frontier, with Mrs. Felix Cardona, wife of a Venezuelan explorer, her four children and an unidentified mechanic as his passengers.

Lieut. Comdr. Fitzhugh Lee, United States naval attache, flew from Ciudad, Bolivar, to join four Venezuelan army planes in the search for the 43-year-old native of Springfield, Mo., who had lived in Venezuela for the last 20 years.

U. S. to Launch 3 Warships on Lincoln's Birthday

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (AP).—Four to six months ahead of schedule, two destroyers and a cruiser will be launched here or in nearby Camden, N. J., as a Lincoln's birthday celebration next Thursday, the Navy announced today.

Ceremony will be held to a minimum because of wartime conditions. Only a few guests will be admitted to the heavily-guarded yards and most of the spectators will be the men who built the ships.

Between 11:30 a. m. and 12 noon (E. W. T.) the cruiser Montpelier will slide from the ways of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation into the Delaware River at Camden, and the destroyers Butler and Gherardi will be launched at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

War Sidelights

Needle-Sharp Stakes Await Jap 'Chutists

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 (AP).—Bamboo sticks, sharpened to needle points, have been planted along Javanese beaches and around airports in anticipation of Japanese invasion, movie maker David Griffin said today.

In an interview the producer told of observations on a recent trip through the East Indies:

"Every beach landing in Java is sown with acres and acres of sharpened bamboo at intervals of 2 feet, which would immediately impale Japanese parachutists and greatly impede landing parties."

The Goose Stroke?

London, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Regimented German sailors even swim in formation when their U-boats are sunk, a Dutch newspaper reported today.

When the Dutch submarine Victors sank the German U-boat 95, the newspaper said, the Victors' crew was amazed to see the German survivors swimming "in formation" led by their commander, Capt. Schreiber.

"There were four officers and eight men," it added. "Not only did they swim together, but not one shouted for help until the leader gave the command. Then all yipped at once."

Slight Misapprehension

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 5 (AP).—A story is going the rounds about a New Jersey woman air raid spotter who recently reported two biplanes and a submarine over her post.

The submarine later was identified as a blimp.

The lady's friends explained she never had seen a blimp, and it looked like a sub to her.

Goering Leaves Rome

Berlin (from broadcasts), Feb. 5 (AP).—Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering left Rome by special train last night to return to Germany after an eight-day visit in Italy during which he conferred with Premier Mussolini and inspected German air units operating from Italian territory.

services to be required of the child-placement agencies.

Members of the committee would include a member of the Board of Public Welfare, who would serve as chairman; a staff member of the District Health Department; a staff member of the Welfare Board, and representatives from each of five charitable organizations "having an organized program for placing children in family homes."

Similar legislation now exists in most of the States at the present time. The District now has no way of regulating persons or agencies dealing with children nor of preventing persons or agencies operating as child-placing organizations for profit.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the District health subcommittee, presented the bill on the floor yesterday. It had been unanimously indorsed by members of the House District Committee.

New Cabinet Ends Egyptian Crisis

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cairo, Feb. 5.—The crisis in the Egyptian government which was precipitated by the severance of relations with the French Vichy government was resolved today when the leader of the Wafdist (Nationalist) Party, Mustapha Nahas Pasha, formed a new government which satisfied British officials. It was comprised of Wafdist ministers.

It was learned that the Vichy envoy, Jean Pozzi, will leave Egypt with his entire staff before February 10, in accordance with the new government's plan. The view was taken that, regardless of the sympathies of Pozzi and his staff, they represented a government pledged to collaboration with the Axis.

Phantom Killer Strikes in Anacostia

the hottest clew to the phantom of Anacostia—a set of footprints in the snow. He had them preserved in plaster.

Informed yesterday of the mysterious slaying of Billy a few yards from Lanham's house on the Fort Dupont tree nursery reservation, Sergt. McKee recalled significantly that the prints he discovered on February 6, 1930, were a stone's throw from the same house.

"I wonder—no, it just couldn't be!" said the sergeant, who has charge of the Metropolitan Police pistol range. "After 12 years, it couldn't be the same creature that's committing these killings. And yet . . ."

The goat was found dying Wednesday morning. It was the special pet of Lanham's grandson, 11-year-old Samuel G. Conley, jr. A few months ago his cocker spaniel, Prince, went the same way. Frisky little Speck, a fox terrier, preceded Prince.

Sammy, son of Lieut. Col. Samuel G. Conley, U. S. A., hugged General closely to his chest yesterday. General is a young police dog and Sammy's last surviving pet.

"Gee, I hope that whatever it is doesn't get General," moaned Sammy.

The phantom killer—it always strikes by daylight and yet is never seen—tipped off Billy's fate on Sunday by slaying a neighbor's pet duck and depositing the remains near Lanham's front door. The duck, too, had been bitten in the neck.

Sergt. McKee believes that the Anacostia phantom of 1930 was a panther, escaped from a carnival wintering on the Baltimore Boulevard. He says he took the beast's footprints to the Smithsonian Institution, where they were pronounced those of a big cat-like animal.

"It's mysterious, all right," confessed the policeman.

To the worried superintendent of the District's tree system, it's more than that; it's unnerving. To crown his bad luck, he fell into a goldfish pond Tuesday morning, when the temperature was below freezing, while rescuing someone's wandering dog.

"I'm taking a short vacation just as soon as I can get away," said Lanham.

Labor Board Takes First Case From Miss Perkins

The War Labor Board yesterday took steps to settle the question of "shift wages," a theory problem which has been a major factor in preventing the conversion of war industries to around-the-clock operation.

The board after a conference with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins intervened in a dispute between General Motors Corporation and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers involving operation of a swing shift and pay for Saturday, Sunday and night work.

It was the first time in the history of the War Labor Board or its predecessor, the National Defense Mediation Board, that the Government's overall mediating body took jurisdiction of a case on its own motion before it was certified as "critical" by the Secretary of Labor.

It is understood that any decision made by the board will be regarded as an important precedent which will guide the change-over of the entire automobile industry and the rest of America's vast armament arsenal to a continuous production basis.

Hearings on the dispute will be held next Tuesday. Principal issue is understood to be a provision of the present contract calling for double pay for Sunday work. The company believes this and other extra-pay clauses which were included in the contract when General Motors was operating on a 5-day week and single shift should be eliminated.

A board spokesman said that both General Motors and the union had agreed in advance to permit the board to intervene and to abide by its decision. Meanwhile, conversion to continuous operation is being allowed to proceed with the understanding that any board decision will be retroactive.

Present practice of paying wage bonuses for Saturday, Sunday, and night work is regarded in some quarters as a dangerous inflation-producing factor. Some workers employed on rush construction jobs whereby customary extra-pay provisions prevailed have succeeded in doubling their usual salaries during some weeks.

Bethlehem Steel Pay Talks Break Down

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—Contract negotiations between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) and the Bethlehem Steel Co. were broken off today, it was announced by James F. Dewey, Labor Department conciliator.

Dewey said he had telegraphed Dd. John R. Steelman, head of the Federal Conciliation Service, asking that the situation be immediately referred to the War Labor Board for consideration of two issues—wage questions and union security.

Dewey said that at a meeting between the parties today there developed no possibility of a compromise by either side regarding these two issues.

Involved in the negotiations, he said, were 14 plants and approximately 90,000 steel workers of the Bethlehem company. The SWOC, he said, sought a $1 a day increase which would bring the Bethlehem wage scale to the highest in the industry.

Union Seeking Rise From General Motors

Detroit, Feb. 5 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) announced today the union had drawn up six demands, including a union shop clause and a $1 daily wage increase, for submission to General Motors Corporation in forthcoming wage negotiations.

The proposals, said Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's GM department, will be acted upon Saturday and Sunday by the GM Council representing 190,000 workers in 90 corporation plants.

They are:

1. A wage increase of $1 a day for all employes, including provision for readjustment every three months based upon living costs in major automotive manufacturing centers.

2. A union shop provision whereby all employes covered by the agreement shall become members of the union and remain in good standing as a condition of employment. New employes are to become members within 30 days after date of employment.

3. Revision of seniority provisions "which will make for maximum use of the labor supply in national defense and at the same time protect seniority rights."

4. Extension of powers of the impartial umpire to permit him to rule on and interpret all contract provisions.

5. The corporation to grant all employes on the seniority list a $100 defense savings bond in lieu of vacation with pay.

6. Establishment of union plant defense and antisabotage committees in all plants.

Reuther said that wage increases obtained a year ago by the U. A. W.-C. I. O. in corporation plants and amounting to 10 cents an hour "have been offset entirely by rising living costs."

Union Ratifies Bendix Contract

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 5 (AP).—A new contract providing wage increases of from 5½ to 10 cents an hour to about 6300 employes was ratified today by union employes of the Bendix products division of the Bendix Aviation Corporation.

The contract was accepted by the Bendix corporation January 30 and becomes effectvie February 16.

War Production Figures Are Gratifying to Roosevelt

A marked increase in payments for war material and the clearance of new war orders was revealed by production officials last night, who also indicated that the general program during the last month was "well up to and ahead" of schedule.

The disclosures followed a statement of Presidential Secretary Stephen Early yesterday that "the President is gratified by reports from his advisers that the war production program which he outlined to Congress is becoming a reality."

Figures Compared

War Production Board officials said that Treasury and Reconstruction Finance Corporation war spending during January—an approximate measure of actual production—was about $2,276,000,000. This compares with the $2,240,000,000 which the agency had previously estimated as the necessary rate last month to keep up with the requirements of the President's announced war program.

The expenditure compares with slightly less than two billion dollars in July, 1940, when the program began.

Military contracts cleared (approved but not necessarily let) in January reached the surprisingly large total of $11,652,000,000, as compared with $3,482,000,000 in December, and a previous all-time high record of $4,729,000,000 in June, 1940, when a rush was made to obligate funds at the end of a fiscal year.

Ahead in Some Cases

Officials said that January figures showed planes and tanks well up and in some cases ahead of the original schedules. Artillery and ordnance production was described as "moving up with extreme rapidity, showing great progress." Ammunition production was said to be particularly improved.

Another favorable development was forecast by W. H. Harrison, director of the WPB production division, who said that the two billion dollars 1942 requirement for new machine tool production under the war program is "reasonable of attainment."

Harrison pointed out that 1941 production totaled 840 million dollars worth of tools, and that present production was at an annual rate of $1,100,000,000.

War Board Expected to Settle Debate on Civilian Gasoline

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

The War Production Board is scheduled to settle a long-standing debate over whether civilians will have gasoline with an "as usual" octane content during the war, it was learned yesterday.

The controversy is between the Office of the Petroleum Coordinator, attempting to maintain civilian gasoline at an octane content almost as high as the present levels, and the WPB Civilian Supply and Materials division, seeking to conserve scarce supplies of lead, ethyl alcohol and chlorine.

According to WPB officials, the Petroleum Coordinator's office, headed by Acting Coordinator Ralph K. Davies, Standard Oil of California vice president, requested the allocation of 130 million pounds of tetra-ethyl lead for civilian purposes this year, thus enabling an average standard gasoline of about 74 octanes, as compared to the 76 average before the war, and the present average of only about 72.3.

Performance Is in Doubt

Civilian Supply division officials, however, have opposed this request for several weeks, contending that 50 million pounds of the tetra-ethyl product is sufficient and would enable the manufacture of civilian gasoline at an average rate of 68 to 70 octanes.

The controversy has centered on the question of whether this lowered rate will permit satisfactory auto performance, with WPB officials taking the affirmative.

At the Office of the Petroleum Coordinator, a spokesman yesterday denied that his agency had ever requested an allocation as large as 130 million pounds. He declined to state the amount of the coordinator's request, or to explain the refusal.

To supply the 80 million pounds of tetra-ethyl lead in excess of the 50 million which the civilian supply division deems adequate would require 30,000 short tons of lead, nine million gallons of ethyl alcohol, and from 20,000 to 32,000 tons of chlorine. Shortages exist in all three materials, which are under strict allocations to piece out essential military demands.

Use of Lead Restricted

The WPB has already restricted the use of lead in many civilian processes, forbidding it in toy and novelty manufacture and limiting its use throughout a wide field.

Chlorine has been similarly restricted, particularly in the field of cleaners. At the same time, the need for ethyl alcohol in explosives manufacture is so great that all distilleries with capacity to make it have been required to give up the manufacture of beverage alcohol for gin and whisky.

WPB experts admit that the 68 to 70 octane gasoline made under the 50 million pound allocation would not permit the efficient operation of "critical" engines. The allocation would provide, however, for a higher octane gasoline for such engines on essential trucks and buses.

The difference between present grades of motor fuel and those at the 68-70 octane rating would not be noticed by the average motorist, and at most, would require only a carburetor adjustment to permit efficient operations, WPB officials declare.

The controversy, which is said to have been a bitter one and to have dragged on for several weeks, may be considered by the WPB and acted on by its chairman, Donald M. Nelson, at the body's next meeting, on Tuesday.

Rationers' Special—Spiced and Nice With Natural Sweetening

In days of shortages it is comforting to know that a cake as pictured here can still be made. Miss Eleanor Howe (inset) nationally known home economist, is creator of this spice cake. The pie meringue reached peak of perfection without benefit of sugar since marshmallows were used

Cater to Sweet Tooth With Sugar Substitutes

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

HOW CAN Mrs. All-American Homemaker go on baking her cakes and cookies, topping them with yum-yum icings, when the sugar situation is as it is? It really isn't such a problem to find new ways to make the old stand-bys, with some new creations tossed in, if the suggestions of the home economists are mastered. Miss Eleanor Howe, coeditor of "What's New in Home Economics," is a nationally known home economist who has been working all hours with her staff in Chicago laboratories in order to give the country as soon as possible ideas on so-called sugarless cakes. These research workers haven't succeeded in eliminating all sugar, but they have certainly cut the quantity tremendously.

Martha Ellyn

When the sugar situation loomed, Miss Howe immediately launched new ways to make old favorites. But she had time from her busy-as-a-bee activities to tell me a few days ago about her idea of women's part in defense activities and to give me the recipe for a cake that has come out of the sugar problem.

"The war brings us to a very real opportunity to express our own individuality and to be creative in all of the various fields of cookery," she said. "We all need to accept this as a time of challenge, not of defeat, and we are going to help keep the home fires burning by going into the kitchens and putting into effect every bit of creative ability we have in every field pertaining to foods and cookery.

New Version

"In fact, one of my very favorite cake recipes, inherited in my mother's recipe box, and the cake of all cakes, which to me as a child seemed to have a more unusual and better flavor than almost any other cake I had ever known, has evolved into a new version. We have revived it and worked it up into modern fashion and it still retains the same charm which it used to have."

Miss Howe's new version of the old favorite is a spice cake with butterscotch frosting. In fact, this cake is so delicious that its epitaph might well be—"If I am so soon done for, what was I begun for?"

Following is the recipe:

Spice Cake—Sift 2 cups cake flour once, measure. Mix ¼-cup the flour with 1 cup fine-cut nut meats, 2-3 cup raisins and 1-3 cup fine-cut citron. Sift the remainder of the flour with ½-teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½-teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½-teaspoon nutmeg and 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½-teaspoon nutmeg and 1 teaspoon allspice. Cream ½-cup shortening (part butter) until soft, add 1 cup brown sugar (firmly packed) gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Stir in 2 well-beaten eggs. And the flour mixture alternately with 3-4 cup sour milk fruits and stir until well-distributed throughout the batter.

Turn into a greased 8-inch tube pan or greased 8-inch square pan and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 to 50 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Remove from oven and let stand about 15 minutes. Remove from pan and cool on cake rack.

Butterscotch Frosting—Combine 1¼ cups brown sugar (firmly packed) with 1¼ cups granulated sugar and 1¼ cups milk and bring to a boil while stirring constantly. Then cook without stirring to 232 degrees or until a small amount of the syrup will form a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees). Beat until creamy, then spread on cake.

The modern version of the spice cake is but one of the many foods that have made their debut in the kitchens presided over by Eleanor Howe. She and her staff are finding that delicious cookies, too, can bt made with the substitution of be made with the substitution of ple syrup and crystal syrup for a large portion of the sugar usually included in them.

For fillings, toppings, frosting and icings which again are designed to use as little sugar as possible, Miss Howe and assistants are finding that chocolate bars can be melted and used as excellent toppings.

They are also working with various meringues made with marshmallows so that they stand up even when not baked all the way through. Jellies, jams and preserves of every kind make delicious fillings and a sprinkling of confectioners' sugar rather than whole icings, as a topping for layer cakes in which these have been used as a filling, can be used. A delicious thick filling made with raisins and nuts, flavored with just a bit of lemon is another innovation that is one of their delicious deviations in fillings.

Nutritional Blessing

The sugar shortage may prove to be a nutritional blessing because it shows us how to eat more abundantly of those foods that give us proteins, minerals and vitamins. Sugar contains no proteins, minerals or vitamins. But sugar does give a great amount of calories for it is estimated that the average person has a sugar caloric intake of about 575 calories a day.

There's no denying we are a "sweet tooth Nation." We were told recently that the average sugar consumption per person has been 75 pounds annually. Now it is said by Leon Henderson, price administrator, that because of the sugar shortage we are to be allowed 50 pounds per year per person. We need alcohol derived from sugar to make smokeless powder so that our soldiers and sailors can fight on to victory.

We have all had pretty rugged ancestors and they in their pioneer days did strenuous work that burned up more energy than we are using today. Our grandmothers and grandfathers averaged but ten pounds of sugar per year.

Sugar has its place in the diet, but the average diet could be improved by reducing the sugar intake perhaps as much as one half. Here are three good reasons:

1. Sugar blunts the appetite for more needed foods.

2. Sugar is irritating to the mucous membrane of the stomach and this condition is lessened if sugar is taken in small quantities, diluted with other foods. Not only is sugar irritating but it ferments easily in the stomach. The gas formed produces physical discomfort and the products of fermentation irritate the digestive tract.

3. Sugar is taken in excess because it has great appetite appeal. Each pound of surplus body weight means surplus calories. It is much easier to do without the surplus calories than it is to reduce the surplus weight.

Sugars and sweets are not unwholesome, but the excess intake of them is. Therefore, the wholesomeness of sweets depends upon the energy needed and the quantity and concentrations of the sweets that are eaten. It is well to remember when tempted by a rich dessert "he who would eat dessert should work."

We are accustomed to using sugar as a sweetening. It never occurs to use something else. But there are many substitutes and new flavor treats in store. Honey, molasses and maple syrup all give foods a delightful, distinctive flavor. And candy, jelly and preserves can all be used as the sweetening agent on occasions.

So begin experimenting with other sweets and experience new tastes and flavors. But how? Serve more fruits, such as apples, oranges, bananas, pineapples and grapes. You'll not only be getting natural sugar, but protective vitamins and minerals not present in sugar.

Used Dried Fruit

Use dried fruits, such as prunes, raisins, figs, peaches and apricots, that need no additional sweetening. And by using dried fruits you will give an additional bit of help to the Government. Shipping facilitieis are being taxed and dried fruits come in small packages. Dried fruits are both good shippers and good keepers, besides being beneficial nutritionally, because they are an excellent source of minerals (iron, calcium, phosphorous, potassium) and the vitamins contained are numerous and of real significance in quality.

You can even go so far as to serve a delicious dinner that is prepared entirely without sugar. Here is the menu and the recipes.

Sugarless Dinner Menu

Half Grapefruit
Baked Glazed Ham
Sweet Potato Puffs
Fried Apple Rings
Baked Acorn Squash
Lemon Sherbet

It is honey, orange marmalade and corn syrup that are used as the sweetening agent in the following recipes:

Baked Glazed Ham—Prepare ham and boil until tender or use the already cooked kinds. Stud with cloves and cover with ½ cup of honey that has been warmed so that it will spread easily. Sprinkle with bread crumbs and place in a baking dish. Bake in moderate oven for 40 to 50 minutes, basting often until the fat is browned.

Sweet Potato Puffs—Bake potatoes until tender. Remove from shells and mash well. Add a piece of butter, a dash of nutmeg and enough milk to make soft creamy mixture. Return to shells. In the center of each potato drop a teaspoon of orange marmalade and return to oven for potatoes to brown.

Baked Acorn Squash—The squash can be baked along in the oven with the ham. Cut the squash in half and season with salt and pepper, and dot with butter. Arrange squash around the meat and baste them occasionally with the ham liquid. They will take about the same time to cook as the ham.

Fried Apple Rings—Apples combine well with ham and sweet potatoes. Core apples and cut into thick cross sections. Dip in flour and fry in skillet in which equal parts of butter and bacon fat have been melted. Brown apples on both sides over medium heat, then cover and cook until soft over low heat.

Lemon Sherbet—Prepare according to any reliable recipe for sherbet but use corn syrup for sweetening. Corn syrup has a nice way of freezing without getting icy.

Variety Can Be Provided By Dumplings

IN THE old days when the variety of foods we now enjoy was altogether unknown, grandma often made use of dumplings to make her roasts bear repetition. And what feathery bits of pastry those dumplings were!

Directions for making dumplings, scratched in frilly writing, were treasured along with the family pewter and rosepoint lace, for without the recipe the secret of the perfect dumpling could only be achieved by trial and error. But that is no longer true, for recipes are now tested in many ways. Here is a recipe that is thoroughly reliable:

Dumplings—Sift 1 cup flour with 2 teaspoons cream of tartar baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add ½ cup cold water or milk to make soft dough. Drop by spoonsfuls in hot stew; steam, covered, for 10 minutes. Plenty of gravy is necessary for successful dumplings.

A well-balanced meal can be achieved by serving veal balls with dumplings in tomato sauce, a crisp salad, enriched bread and butter and a fruit dessert. Here is a recipe for making veal balls with dumplings in tomato sauce:

Veal Balls With Dumplings in Tomato Sauce—Use recipe for dumplings. Season 1 pound chopped veal with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Form in 12 small balls; brown in deep kettle. Add 2 cups, 1 large can tomato puree and 2 cups water. Add 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 bay leaf and 2 tablespoons minced onion. Bring to boil. Make dumplings, drop by spoonfuls into boiling sauce; cover tightly; steam 10 minutes.

With apples so plentiful, why not make a Grape Nut Flakes Brown Betty.

Grape Nuts Flakes Brown Betty—Arrange 3 large pared apples that have been cored and thinly sliced, in a greased baking dish and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Cream 4 tablespoons butter, add ¾ cup firmly packed brown sugar gradualy and cream thoroughly. Add 1½ cups grape nut flakes, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon salt and mix well. Spread over the apples. Bake, covered in moderate oven, 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Then remove cover and continue baking 15 minutes longer

Thriftier Pork Roasts?

THE B VITAMINS NATURAL TO PORK
THIAMINE (B_1)	1.60 milligrams
RIBOFLAVIN (G or B_2)	.34 milligram
ANTI-PELLAGRA VITAMIN	11.0 milligrams

Even after thorough cooking, an average serving of lean pork supplies an abundance of thiamine (vitamin B_1)...so essential for physical and mental fitness.
In addition, pork, like all meat, is 96 to 98 per cent digestible, is rich in complete, high quality proteins, and contains important minerals (iron, copper, phosphorus).

This Seal means that all statements made in this advertisement are acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

THERE are two ends to every pork loin, but only one center. Because many women ask for the familiar center section, both for roasts and chops, the end cuts often can be had for less money. Ask your meat-man about them.

To Roast Pork. Pork should always be cooked thoroughly. The cut slice should be grayish, without even a tinge of pink. Season with salt and pepper, place fat side up in open roasting pan. Roast uncovered and without water in moderate oven (350° F.). Allow 30 minutes per lb. or until meat thermometer reaches 185° F.

Elizalde Is Sworn In Here To Philippine Cabinet Post

Sworn in yesterday at 5 p. m. as a member of the Philippine Cabinet without portfolio and as a member of the Philippine Council of State, J. M. Elizalde, Philippine resident commissioner here, spoke a few sharp words on the worth of Artemio Ricarte and Benigno Ramos.

These two, Tokyo and Berlin radio broadcasts have insisted, have been returned to Manila from Japan with view to organization of a puppet government. First, Elizalde asserted that "no Filipino of any importance whatever" would serve at the head of a Japanese-controlled puppet state in the islands. He did not think the Japanese intended such a move.

He described Ricarte as a self-exile with "no political influence of any kind or following by anybody. I knew him in Japan, a poor man running a restaurant. If they want to take him to Manila and buy him a couple of new suits and let him parade around the streets, all right."

He termed Ramos, who is head of the Sakdalista Party, who has been in Japan a year a discredited political leader.

Sworn in by Murphy

Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy swore the commissioner into his two additional ranks in the presence of Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Maritime Commission chairman, and other Federal officials.

The Philippines government is still in the islands, he declared, probably "somewhere around Gen. MacArthur, somewhere around the Army."

He feared the invaders might find a source of scrap iron in the Philippines railroads by tearing up the tracks and that "the point of the bayonet" might be used to assist the movement of vast quantities of supplies out of the islands to Japan. Approximately 300,000 tons of refined sugar had been bagged for shipment when the invasion came, he said. Besides, there was available a million tons of sugar (the islands' normal annual crop is about a million tons) and a million and a half tons of rice ready for harvesting.

Hemp and Copra There, Too

He estimated that 400,000 bales of fiber hemp were ready for shipment when the Japs came in. He remarked on its almost vital value to navies. Also into Japanese hands fell large quantities of copra, which is pressed to produce glycerine for explosives. The commissioner fixed the annual production at about one and a half million tons. Mahogany, used in the building of boats, was another imperiled product of the islands, he stated.

He said he had not heard whether the Japanese had begun carrying the loot away. He doubted that they had enough ships for such use.

Club Opposes Ban on Liquor Price Listings

The board of directors of the Washington Advertising Club yesterday went on record unanimously opposing a House-passed measure prohibiting the advertising of retail liquor prices here.

The resolution was adopted on the eve of a Senate hearing on the measure, to be held at 10:30 a. m. today. The resolution, forwarded to the Senate District Committee, sates:

"Such prohibition constitutes an invasion of public right because no offering is complete that does not protect the purchaser on the price to be paid. It is oppressive to public convenience and a throttle of good trade practice.

"Any commodity or public service made available for the American people should have the benefit and the scrutiny of advertised quality and price. We ask this not only for the protection of those engaged in advertising, but that any and all business may be thus safeguarded and the public may continue to receive the maximum in protection."

As passed by the House, the bill will also prohibit the issuance of liquor licenses to stores within 600 feet of schools, churches and other public institutions here. Senator Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, author of the Delaware alcoholic beverage control act, is chairman of the subcommittee which will conduct today's hearing.

Citizen Unit Opposes Proposed Ban

The Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association last night expressed opposition to legislation forbidding the advertising of retail liquor prices in the District.

At the same time, the organization adopted a resolution commending Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on his conduct in office. Lodge, recently reappointed by the Commissioners. has been under fire in Congress.

26-Billion Navy Funds Bill Ready For Signing

After a five-minute explanation by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the chamber unanimously approved a Senate-House Committee's draft of the huge naval bill—largest single appropriations measure in legislative history—and sent it on to the President.

Final approval of the measure brought to approximately $39 billion dollars the direct appropriations and contract authority approved by Congress for military uses in the first month of the present session.

Fire Damages Food Warehouse

Boston, Feb. 5 (AP).—A section of a 1000-foot warehouse of food on the banks of the Mystic River was destroyed today by fire which was attributed to a short circuit.

Firemen, summoned by four alarms, brought the flames under control after a two-hour battle. The building was about a quarter of a mile from the Boston Navy Yard.

The flames were subdued before they could spread to a wool warehouse or to a chemical storage plant of the Dupont Co. Freight cars and a freighter moored nearby were moved out of danger.

Train-Wrecking Attempt Thwarted

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 5 (INS).—Discovery of an attempt to wreck Union Pacific trains was announced today by Sheriff George Carroll at Cheyenne.

The sheriff said a man had been arrested and held for questioning, but he would not reveal his name.

Spikes had been removed from two sections of track near Archer, 7 miles east of Cheyenne, the sheriff said. A

Money Circulation Increase, Officials Suspect Hoarding

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday reported a 134-million-dollar increase in money in circulation during the week ended February 4, which some officials said might be a sign of hoarding of currency.

While these officials said the large increase at this season of the year was "supicious," they warned against any premature conclusions.

Due to steadily increasing demand both at home and abroad for American money, the volume of American money in circulation has grown in recent years from about $8,500,000,000 to around 11 billion dollars.

Since the United States has embarked on unprecedented war expenditures, officials said, a few people have become panicky that their money might be taken to finance the war and may have converted some bank deposits into cash which could be hidden. Government officials, including Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., have promised publicly that no one need have such fears, and that all savings are perfectly safe.

President Gets D. C. Off-Street Parking Bill Today

President Roosevelt today will receive the District off-street parking bill which the Senate yesterday passed, concurring in a minor, technical House amendment.

Designed to help alleviate Washington's traffic congestion, the bill authorizes the Commissioners to set up parking lots which would be operated under the direction of a special board appointed by the local government heads.

The purpose of the bill, as brought out by a special Senate District subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, in hearings held last fall, would be to create more parking lots, chiefly on the fringe of the downtown area to relieve traffic.

The traffic problem will be attacked on another front Monday when the House District Committee takes up a bill sponsored by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, which would regulate parking lot rates here.

Ohio 10-Year-Old Tackles Another College Course

Cleveland, Feb. 5 (AP).—Western Reserve University's 10-year-old boy student has added a history course to his college curriculum.

Finishing the first semester of freshman chemistry in the upper half of his class, precocious Kenneth Wolf decided to enroll in a course on history of Western civilization.

Kenneth hopes to get an A grade in history.

The boy, who played the piano at the age of 3 and started composing at 5, follows a rigid schedule that begins at 7 a. m. and ends at 8:30 p. m. in addition to his university courses, he studies piano and music composition, relaxes by skating, swimming and beating his father at table tennis.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris H. Wolf — both attorneys, Kenneth never received formal schooling until he was accepted by Western Reserve last semester.

Government Girls Evicted, Seek $25,000 Damages

Five Government girls who claim that they were unceremoniously and unjustly evicted from their boarding house last November brought suit in District Court yesterday asking a total of $25,000 damages from their erstwhile landlords.

The girls are Eileen Chafitz, Betty Skibbins, Frances Morewitz, Evelyn Feldman and Alice Tolchinsky, all Federal workers. Each seeks $5000 to cover "nervous shock, great inconvenience, embarrassment and mental anguish" as well as room rent which they had paid in advance.

They are suing Maurice and Estelle Gersing, proprietors of a boarding house at 1761 Hobart Street Northwest. They charge that one night shortly after they had moved in, Mr. and Mrs. Gersing broke into their rooms as they were going to bed, they allege, and put them out on the street after abusing and insulting them.

121st Engineers Regiment Marks 18th Anniversary

The 121st Engineers, an Army regiment formerly part of the District National Guard, last night marked its eighteenth anniversary with special ceremonies at Fort George Meade.

Brig. Gen. Amos W. Woodcock, commanding officer of the Twenty-ninth Division, spoke to the group on its motto, "Nihil Timemus" (We Fear Nothing), and declared, "With a motto like that, there is no doubt that we will win the war."

Col. John W. Oehmann, former commanding officer of the regiment, praised its organization and declared that it made a fine record on maneuvers. Lieut. Col. Douglas A. White read a history of the regiment and then presented colonel's eagles to its commanding officer, Col. Frank T. Leilich, of Baltimore, who was recently promoted.

74 Axis Ships Sunk or Damaged During January

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—Allied air forces operating over wide stretches of European water, sank or damaged at least 74 Axis vessels of all types in January, it was estimated in an official summary released tonight.

In the Pacific theater, where Allied strength is increasing, 52 Japanese vessels were sent to the bottom or hit. Destruction of a 20,000-ton liner was the highlight of operations in the Mediterranean, where 15 vessels were sunk or damaged.

In the North Sea and off the Atlantic coast six enemy supply ships and a tanker were sunk, damaged or set afire.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

To Mrs. Smug

I realize how good you are,
That all you do is above par,
But please don't tell me o'er and o'er,
It gets to be a frightful bore,
And what is more, you give suspect

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Truthtown's eccentric dowager, Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, is not at all discouraged by the failure of her initial effort to form a defense walking class.

"I have decided," said Mrs. Beetle yesterday "that the reason no one came to our first meeting was that we have not yet popularized smart walking attire. I am now planning a fashion show of the latest walking togs to be held next week at the Hotel Swank. We hope to prove that it is just as smart to walk as to ride."

The dowager added that if the fashion show failed to arouse interest in defense walking, she would petition Congress to decree a special defense uniform for walkers.

A dozen or more local grande dames have enrolled in a defense class in cooking and marketing to be conducted by their butlers and chefs each Monday morning at the Plush Sofa Club. Sortwell, butler for Mrs. Abraham Lincoln De-Peyster, is in charge of the course, which will include training in planning simple menus, selecting grocery supplies by telephone and preparing some of the simpler breakfast dishes. A little later a new course "Marketing by Television" will be offered. "We feel at this time that we should prepare ourselves for the direst emergencies," said Mrs. De-Peyster.

The engagement of Miss Rosemary Flitterjig, direct descendant of William the Conqueror, to Mr. F. DeSkiddy Delaphane, lineal descendant of Pithecanthropus Erectus (believed by many scientists to have been the first man), has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Mountjoy Flitterjig, of Truthtown, Long Island, Baldtop, Mont. and Bat's Retreat, Va.

With the Resorters

Palm Beach, Fla.—A social feud in the interest of national defense is on here between the Cabana Knitters and the Solarium Stitchers. Heading the Cabana Knitters, who knit on the beach under cabanas, is Mrs. Valentine de-Forest Mannon, while Mrs. Elspeth Ermine heads the Solarium Stitchers, who sew each morning in the solarium of the exclusive Relax and Let Go Club.

Each group is seeking to enlist new and important names in its ranks, with the result that a great many ultra-swanky visitors who came here to rest have been put to work. Membership in either group brings great social prestige, and stringent efforts are made to keep out social upstarts.

Philander Plunkette, recent arrival here and holder of the Truthtown divorce record, is a twosome with the Princess Torso, who has recently opened a Corset Shoppe. The rumored Mrs. Plunkette-to-be shuns society, but is frequently photographed on the beach.

Corset Supply in 'Good Shape;' Expert Advises on Conservation

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

WOMEN may now call a halt to their wild corset buying. The Government has promised rubber to corset manufacturers. The exact allotments have not been definitely decided yet, but the amount supplied will be essential for their needs.

But even if the scare were not over, it would be foolish for women to hoard corsets. They would last only if tucked away in a boudoir drawer. Rubber deteriorates by contact with body oils, not necessarily by age. The fact is, however, that most women are overlooking the best preservative for corsets—soap and water.

This was pointed out by Jean Gordon, Warner Brothers Co. corset fashionist, who visited Washington schools recently to talk to girls. Mrs. Gordon also said, "The best way to make a girdle last is to wash it often in lukewarm water, with a good suds. Then hang it in a cool place."

Don't become alarmed, either, over the fact that girdles are becoming more standardized generally. Jean Gordon explained that simplification of corsets was started even before the war, as it was found simpler garments would better meet the needs of women.

"There is no more of this bridge-luncheon business for the average woman, and there are fewer afternoon affairs," she said. "There is virtually no in-between wear. Women are either wearing Red Cross uniforms or suits by day. Then they go ultra-feminine by night. They must have a girdle that looks well under a uniform, or under a suit, as well as a very sheer one for wear they dress. And now that women will be gardening on small plots of ground, they will also need lightweight panty girdles and comfortable bras to wear under slacks."

Thus evolves the corset wardrobe, which proves to be more convenient and economical in the long run. Here it is explained by Mrs. Gordon:

CORSET WARDROBE:

Panty girdle and bra—for active sportswear, defense gardening, junior dancing and all-in-one coveralls for airplane factories.

Girdle type with the "stay-up-top," especially for uniforms, suit skirts, office, motor corps, Red Cross and functional wear.

Although corsets are simplified for spring, there is no basic change in silhouette. The waistline is still long. Strangely enough, it was this corset company that started the torso silhouette more than three years ago. When the Chicago-born American designer, Mainbocher, came back to this country from Europe he designed for the Warner Brothers what was known as the wasp waist garment, which started the vogue. Ironically enough, the silhouette was misnamed and should have been calls the "waltz" waist, but "wasp" stuck!

Chintz on Walls

The decorative scheme for a bedroom furnished in mahogany was suggested by an entry in Samuel Pepys' Diary, "I bought my wife a chint for her to hang on her wall." The "chint" used in this room was a documentary Eighteenth Century chintz patterned in a flower and scroll design in blue and tan on a white ground and the entire wall behind the canopied bed was hung with it. The bed itself had a ruffled organdy spread with the canopy top in organdy also. Blue faille silk draperies repeated the soft blue of the chintz.

Molded Lines For Spring

For evening or late afternoon, your figure will be molded to long torso lines this spring. With dresses such as the waist-hugging blue wool worn by Joan Bennett, left, a foundation garment is indispensable. The one below is the type that gives this long line. It is ultra feminine with panels of sheer Nylon marquisette and Lastex.

Furnishings For Home Use Show Big Gain

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

HOME furnishings will probably have a bigger business year than normal—according to present trends and figures. The enormous new demand for home furnishings by war workers can be gauged by the fact that there will be 125,000 new homes built by the Government this year—and this is said to be only 20 per cent of the total of new homes; private industry will build the rest. These homes for the most part will be occupied by people moving in from a distance, few of whom bring along their furnishings (in most cases because their possessions weren't good enough to move).

The curtailment of automobile and tire buying is expected to have an almost immediate effect on home-furnishings business. Partly because people will be stying around home more—and will want to fix the old place up; partly because more jobs at good wages will mean more to spend, and with so many other things curtailed these people will buy home furnishings instead of new cars.

For Home Consumption

Home furnishings are expected to be reasonably available in the stores—with various adjustments of materials—because only about 27 per cent of the industry can be converted to war production. And when certain substitutions of materials are made, it is expected that a well-balanced production for home consumption will be maintained. There is plenty of wood and furniture itself can be made entirely of wood. Cotton fabrics will continue on the market for the present, and the lamp industry, it is thought, can work out substitutions for scarce metal parts (though rumors say there may be a Government order curtailing production 30 per cent. Rugs at first glance will feel the pinch most—their orders are to curtail use of raw wool by 50 per cent over last year's production—actually, though, last year business was 40 per cent above the 1940 level, so the cut won't be so bad as an average. There will undoubtedly be more cotton rugs used—prices on them are up 3 per cent to 10 per cent.

Make Draperies For Spring

HARBINGERS of spring—these rose-sprinkled draperies, with their bevy of little ruffled swags! They're really easy to make.

For materials, printed chintz or sateen would be lovely and either will make satisfactory ruffles . . . nice, perky ones.

The longer your valance board the more swags—and the prettier the effect. Cut each swag out separately, stitch up and, after draping in graceful folds, tack the top to your valance board.

Here's how you cut them. For their width, allow 1/5 the length of your valance board plus extra for overlapping and turn-ins. Cut each twice as deep as you want it when finished. Now slant the ends and cut the bottom in a broad shallow scallop.

So fullness of ruffles will be evenly adjusted, divide ruffle edge and swag edge into eighths, using pins as markers. Fasten ruffle and swag at points of division, then pull up gathering threads, distributing fullness evenly, and baste.

Our 40-page booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," gives full instructions for measuring and sewing draperies, drapery-curtains, glass curtains, swags and valances—in many smart styles. Has directions for jabots, tie-backs, hold-backs, clever trimmings.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of the Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Virginian Says Woman Having True Insight Into Man's Dependence Upon Her to Be Fastidious in All Things Will Not Smoke if Husband Disapproves

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On February 3, you made answer to a letter from a man, aged 51, married 13 years, who "literally adores" his wife, but fears his love and respect for her may fade because she smokes cigarettes and he detests the habit. She has broken her solemn promise to give up the habit by continuing surreptitiously to smoke,—so that he is now as much disturbed by her deceit as he is troubled by her addiction to nicotine. Yet, you tell him that, "to the disinterested analyst," his attitude seems more offensive than his wife's behavior.

My wife and I, who are slightly older than this gentleman, have been married about the same length of time as he. The morning his letter was published, my wife handed me the article to read. After reading the man's letter, and before proceeding to your reply, I said to my wife: "Miss Haworth will not approve of his position. She would call him 'an old fogey.'" You see, Miss Haworth, your articles have not been popular with me. While you are not intentionally endeavoring to lower the standards of womanhood, most of your articles tend in that direction.

You can judge a nation's culture by its women and girls. And I wish that the women of our country could realize how important it is for them to hold aloft, for the guidance of man, the torch of Fastidious Goodness,—doing everything in their power to evoke his highest respect and deference. If this man's wife had the slightest insight into the potential moral power of women,—when they really understand and keep faith with man's dependence upon them to be fine in all things,—she would strive to achieve, above all, a close kinship with her husband, as therein lies her greatest chance to know true happiness and keep her husband happy.

How foolish she is to cling to cigarettes, when by so doing she is endangering the happiness of her marriage even in the slightest. Little does she know of life. Little does she realize how precious is the husband she has. Such men are none too plentiful in these days. He is a diamond of the first water, in the scale of human values, and she doesn't know it.

So far as I am concerned, she may smoke all she wants to. I don't object. Smoking is not immoral. Plenty of refined girls and women smoke. But it seems to me that when confronted by a choice between losing her husband's respect, on the one hand, and giving up cigarettes, on the other hand, her common sense should tell her which has greater value for her. Particularly in a world where good men are hard to find. She has best be willing to give up a thousand times more than smoking, if such should be necessary, in order to be to her husband all that is charming and lovely in his sight.

Of course, I know, Miss Haworth, that you will not agree with my viewpoint. But this is a free country, and inasmuch as I concede you the right to your opinions, I hope that you will see fit to publish what I have written.

Respectfully yours,
VIRGINIA GENTLEMAN.

So You Quote Hygienists? So What? Says Reader

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Even before reading your reply of Febraury 3 to "Baffled Husband," I knew what your views would be. (I rather imagine that you yourself smoke, Miss Haworth; and suspect your remarks were therefore not unprejudiced.) And I also know, while writing this rebuttal, that there will be thousands upon thousands of persons to share your attitude.

Although you quote mental hygienists as saying, "Smoking among women has become, during the twentieth century, an accepted social custom; adopted by approximately 60 per cent of women in the Western world,"—I fail to see where there is much difference between the cigarette and the dope habit. Each gets the same hold on the nervous system, so that the habitue is unable to give up the practice and resorts to deceit to conceal his vice from those who disapprove.

If smoking is such a minor vice, why can't this wife give up the habit to please her husband? The answer is: She can't because nicotine has a hold on her; just as it has a hold on the other 60 per cent of addicts, who are furious toward all who hint the truth. In common with the drug addict, the cigarette smokers must have their "pacifier" immediately, when anything goes wrong; when they are nervous; when they are bored; or when they have a headache. You may refer me to your original statement that, "There is a vast difference between smoking a cigarette and taking a dose of nicotine." And that, "Smoking is much less harmful than the biased person believes." But I still say that chronic cigarette smoking is harmful to health; and there's no getting around it.

So you consulted two mental hygienists, whose educational backgrounds include full medical training, in process of formulating your reply? So what? Do you suppose they are going to stick their necks out by condemning a habit in vogue with the class of people who provide their largest practice and have the fattest purses? Mental hygienists and their kith and kin are only human beings, after all, subject to the same frailities as the rest of mankind. And I could cite instances to prove.

Think of the enormous sums of money spent annually on cigarettes. And think how far that money would go toward winning the war, if all smokers were to give up the habit "for the duration." But do you think they will? Not on your life. Not any more than the morphine addict will give up his dope while he can get it.

HOUSEWIFE.

Man Gives "Low Down" In Favor of Smoking

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While refereeing the dispute between "Baffled Husband" and his wife, revolving around his opposition to her smoking, why didn't you give the real argument in favor of letting her smoke, to-wit: If women were to give up cigarettes, half the tobacco factories would have to shut down, throwing who knows how many men out of work and putting half the tobacco farmers out of business.

There would be serious repercussions among match makers, carton manufacturers, advertising agencies, handlers, merchants and others. Magazines would lose a lot of advertising and fire insurance companies would not have the same turn-over in funds. We would be back in the dismal days when the nonsmoking wife had to endure, without protest, the offensive tobacco breath of her husband,—which the modern wife resourcefully neutralizes by exhaling a breath in kind. What is universal is not objectionable.

You might have told him that in view of world-wide conditions, anything that shortens the life span relieves congestion of population and economic pressure. And think how much less "moaning at the bar" there would be if both partners in marriage smoked themselves "out" at about the same time. The athlete's situation should have been cited. How would an athlete know he was getting in good condition if he did not have the habit of smoking to give up during training season?

The thing for "Baffled Husband" to do is take up smoking in self-defense. The alternative, obviously, is for him to be broad-minded and forget the squabble; bearing in mind the probability that if he did not have this particular complaint to brood over, he would see a thousand other faults in his wife that seemed equally objectionable. Yours truly,

WISE GUY.

Lack of Vitamin A May Affect Eyesight and Hamper Driving

By Ida Jean Kain

WOMEN drivers often get blamed for lack of skill when it's their diet that won't pass the test. Even ordinarily the diet is apt to be low in vitamin A, and when a woman goes on reducing rations she is apt to leave it out altogether.

Vitamin A is furnished in butter, cream and whole milk, all of which are looked upon askance as high in calories. Unless carefully planned to include daily a green or yellow vegetable or supplemented with haliver or codliver oil, the reducing menus are bound to be low in this essential. One of the first signs of a deficiency is night blindness, the inability to see well in dim light.

But drivers who fail to get enough vitamin A have other troubles. They find it difficult to readjust their vision after being subjected to the glare of passing headlights. And the deficiency tends to narrow their field of vision. It is hard for them to see the side of the road or a car coming up from the side.

Result of Reducing

Just as a case in point: A man went on a prolonged reducing diet which completely eliminated dairy products and most vegetables from his menus. In a very short time his eyes were so badly affected that he had to be led to his seat in the theater and the pictures were blurred for as long as ten minutes. He couldn't see well enough to drive at night.

Along with those symptoms of vitamin A deficiency, he developed others—rough, dry skin and dull, brittle hair (he began to lose that!). I am glad to say, however, that the story has a cheerful ending. He went back to butter, milk, raw carrots and reinforced his diet with 30,000 units of vitamin A, and, according to scientific report, all the unpleasant symptoms disappeared within a week.

Vitamin A has an important role in eyesight. It is necessary to the regeneration of the visual purple in the retina at the back of the eye. The construction of this purple depends upon vitamin A. If the diet is lacking in A, reconstruction cannot take place. Then normal vision is impossible except in bright light.

Aids General Health

Although stressed here mainly for its prevention of night blindness, vitamin A is important to your general well being. There are many other reasons for including your requirement daily. It increases your resistance to infection, has to do with the health of your teeth and affects the condition of skin, hair and nails.

Your 5000 units which are needed every day can be obtained from menus that are very low in calories simply by having liberal servings of greens and yellow cheese and an egg. But unless you have these foods daily, your diet should be supplemented with either codliver oil or one of the concentrates.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

"Where are you going from here—or is it a military secret?" attractive Mrs. Delos Emmons asked Netherlands Foreign Minister Eelco Van Kleffens.

"It is a military secret," he replied, with a twinkle. "I am going from here . . . to New York. And then," he went on, "I'm coming back to Washington!"

In town, as everybody knows, to discuss the basic problems of war in the Pacific, the personable Minister seems more than willing to take an hour or two off now and then . . . to meet a few Washingtonians, and to find out what type of wartime thinking is going on around these parts.

Minister Van Kleffens

He had an excellent chance yesterday, when he appeared as honor guest at the "after 6 o'clock" party given by George Abell in the latter's Georgetown apartment . . . High ranking Army and Navy officials, a scattering of diplomats, and a number of residential Washingtonians (who vowed and declared they were not parasites) made up the pleasant gathering that lingered on, as usual, at the Abell parties, until long past the dinner hour.

Newbold Walmsley Due Home Today

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, chatted briefly with Minister Van Kleffens, and then moved on to give other guests a chance to talk with the guest of honor . . . Mrs. Towers, who was still putting on her earrings when she arrived at the party ("we simply don't have time to finish dressing these days," she said) was a special center of attention; as was Mrs. James V. Forrestal, who time and again mentioned the "Phantom Ball" she's promoting for the Navy Relief Society.

Mrs. Newbold Walmsley was telling Celeste Crosby Miller and Mrs. Emmons Smith that her husband would be back in town today with the Brazilian Minister of Finance, whom he went to meet in Miami . . .

Mme. Loudon

Mme. Loudon, who was proudly presenting Minister Van Kleffens to a host of prominent guests, was quite a popular guest herself—as usual . . . Mme. Lombard was there; also, Maj. Andrew Wylie, in full uniform; and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, explaining to Brazilian Secretary Hugo Gouthier that she had as difficult a time trying to spell his name as he had in spelling hers.

David Cohn, well-known writer ("The Good Old Days"), was telling the William P. MacCrackens his plans for still another book; attractive Mrs. Lister Hill was explaining why her Senator husband rarely goes out to afternoon parties.

"I'm sorry I don't know you," an engaging woman said to Brig. C. L. Lindemann. "Do you happen to be 'a parasite?'" . . . "I think not," said the Counselor of the British Embassy," but, I regret to say, there are some people who call us 'leeches.'"

Mr. Earle and a Dog's Tale

Senator Arthur Capper came in early, and then reluctantly went on to another party . . . Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten and Dr. and Mme. H. N. Boon of the Netherlands Legation came on from the 5 to 7 fete given by Count and Countess Van Rechteren Limpurg, of the same legation . . . The Swedish Military Attache greeted Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner with courtly grace, while Mme. Wessel talked with Mrs. Ralph Snowden Hill . . . A number of Army officers were there; Also, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, accompanied by Miss Peggy Wagner; a couple of handsome men—members of the Argentine Military Mission; and a guest who made himself a sort of assistant host and turned out to be Gerald Wynne, former newspaper correspondent, who seemed to know everybody there.

One of the most entertaining stories I heard at the party was told to me by a guest who quickly extracted a promise that I would never reveal my "source" . . . The whole country, of course, has read that George H. Earle, our former envoy to Bulgaria, recently returned home with an 80-pound sheep dog in tow—at a time when every person who crosses the Atlantic has difficulty getting passage . . . But what the world hasn't heard is that Mr. Earle first wanted to bring, not just one hound, but three. Seems he listed two sheep dogs and a dachshund among his belongings for travel . . . Told he might have difficulty in bringing three, he left one with a friend in Sofia . . . In Istanbul he was persuaded to leave the dachshund, but the second sheep dog traveled right along with him—by bomber from Cairo to Trinidad; and by clipper the remainder of the way—much to the annoyance of other passengers in the crowded plane.

George H. Earle

Back to the Abell party—the host was everywhere at once, seeing that everybody had a good time . . . insisting that nobody go home ("but you simply mustn't leave now," he said to the Kingsbury Smiths, the William LaBrots, the Bulkley Griffins, the Carlton Holdreges, and scores of others). Two hours later the apartment was filled with guests still enjoying the party.

About The Town: En route to Florida Mrs. Roland Byers is spending a few days in Washington as the guest of Mrs. Carrere Barbour . . .

Mrs. Roland Byers

A cousin of her hostess' former husband, Senator Warren Barbour, Mrs. Byers visited here shortly after she first came over from her home in Belfast, Ireland, a year and a half ago . . . Here with her daughter for the duration, she has been staying with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barbour, in Paterson, N. J. . . . She expects to spend the remainder of the season in the South . . . A number of Washingtonians who recently have mentioned the mammoth Massachusetts Avenue house of Mrs. Summer Welles as being "one the Government should take over first, if more housing space is needed" might be interested in knowing that the mansion was offered to the Government more than two months ago, and that Mrs. Welles would welcome a chance to get it off her hands.

"She has the only real salon in Washington," is what a Cabinet hostess told me not long ago—speaking of Mme. Martins, lovely and lively wife of the Brazilian Ambassador . . . Certainly, every party she gives is something to write home about; and she does know how to make every guest have a good time . . . Well, anyway, a few of her many friends will be on hand to sample that very special brand of Brazilian hospitality tomorrow evening when the Ambassador and Mme. Martins entertain in honor of Arturo Souza Costa, the Brazilian Minister of Finance who, with eight members of his mission, will arrive in Washington today.

The bride, who is from Charleston, Ark., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde T. Hiatt. Mr. Phillips is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. I. Phillips, of Locust Grove, Okla.

The Rev. John B. Smithson, jr., pastor of the Avalon Heights Christ Church, officiated. Following their wedding trip the couple will live at 3650 Minnesota Avenue Northwest.

Birthday Celebrated

Jane Gilman, Mr. Tilghman Wed in Canada

Coming as a great surprise to many of their friends will be the news, just revealed that Charles Tench Tilghman and Miss Isabelle Jane Gilman, whose wedding was scheduled for February 14, were quietly married on January 10 in Amherstburg, Ontario. The couple will arrive in Washington from their honeymoon tomorrow and will make their home at Almodington, Mr. Tilghman's historic estate on the Eastern Shore near Princess Anne, Md., on the Manokin River.

Inspired perhaps by the bridegroom's sister and her fiance, Elliott Johnstone Dent, jr., whose nuptials took place on December 22, a month or so before schedule, the young couple decided to set their event for an earlier date, also.

Consequently young Mr. and Mrs. Dent arrived back in Washington from their honeymoon just in time to join the bridegroom, his mother, Mrs. Charles Tilghman; his brother, Merrill William Tilghman, and his other sister, Miss Catherine Holloway Tilghman for the trip to Canada.

There at a solemn high nuptial mass in the Church of St. John the Baptist in Amherstberg, the marriage took place. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mrs. Harry Finley Gilman, the mother of the bride. Because of the change in date, the arrangements were very informal and only a few announcements were sent out.

The bride, however, was gowned in the traditional white bridal satin, with long train and long veil. Attending her were her two sisters, Miss Mary Gilman and Mrs. William Quinn, of Detroit, Mich. Merrill W. Tilghman was best man for his brother and Mr. Dent was one of the ushers.

Mary McDonald To Be Married

Lieut. Barker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Barker, of Jacksonville, Fla., and was graduated from the University of Florida, at Gainesville, in 1936. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss McDonald attended Washington schools and Ogontz Girls School in Philadelphia. Word of the engagement was received here by her sister, Mrs. Malcolm Burroughs.

The Misses Norris Entertain 40 At Luncheon

The guests numbered 40 when the Misses Marion and Mary Theresa Norris were hostesses at a luncheon yesterday at the R Street home of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris.

Though debutantes are a bit out of season this month, the Norris sister's guest list "numbered a number" of names which were crowding the society pages around the holiday season. Not the poinsettias of these fete-filled weeks, but spring flowers provided the floral note for yesterday's party, however.

The two hostesses were dressed alike in frocks of black, the dull silver-black of taffeta against the deeper black of velvet. On the long lists of guests were Miss Peggy Gordon, Miss Sue Slingluff, Miss Sue Morsell, Miss Mary Lord Andrews, Mrs. Richard Durham, Mrs. Cabell Maddox, Miss Peggy Gearing, Miss Zeva Fish, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Patricia Prochnik and Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson.

Also, Miss Muriel Maddox, Miss Ann Turner, Miss Ellen White, Mrs. J. Conway Hunt, Miss Audrey Cowan, Miss Jane Davis, Miss Margheritta Stirling, Miss Bella Hagner, Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Margaret Hill, Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Barbara Mallory and Mrs. Thad Brown, jr.

Wed 50 Years, Hardins Celebrate

Celebrating their golden wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas Hardin received a host of friends yesterday afternoon at their home on Varnum Street. Their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hardin, were there, and serving as cohostess was their daughter, Miss Dorothy E. Hardin.

Assisting at the party were Miss Margaret Tuckey, Mrs. Joseph O'Dell, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Miss Anita Cajigas, Miss Sally Norbeck, Miss Mary Wolford and Mrs. Wilfred Warner.

Sergt. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Williams, of Gary, Ind., and former student at the University of Minnesota. He was one of the seven original enlisted men in the G-2 section on the organization of General Headquarters, October, 1940.

That evening Mr. and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop 3d, will entertain for the couple a a buffet supper, and the next afternoon Mrs. William L. 20th Century Club Warned Of Sacrifices

SOON the American housewife will walk to market, buy in larger quantities, carry her own bundles home, and give up the luxury of eating out of tin cans.

These are a few of the sacrifices women will be compelled to make in order to win the war, William L. Batt, director of Materials of the War Productions Board, told members of the Twentieth Century Club, yesterday at their monthly luncheon meeting in the Y. W. C. A.

"Upon the housewife," said Mr. Batt, guest speaker, "falls the greater sacrifices. She will serve more dried foods—peas and beans in paper bags. Also, she must do more old fashioned canning and preserving of foods."

Tin Shortage Cited

He pointed out that the limited supply of tin necessitates drastic reduction of canned foods. Only the very essentials that will not keep in any other way will be canned during the duration.

Mr. Batt thinks rubber rings for jars still will be marketed. "Unless," he remarked, "someone invents a device for tightening jar lids without them—and I hope some woman will."

Vacuum cleaners, refrigerators and sewing machines are other household equipment that housewives may be called upon to sacrifice—at least there won't be new ones made, according to Mr. Batt.

Wastefulness Deplored

Remarking that people of the United States have been wasteful, Mr. Batt, urged women to conserve clothes and household equipment. "Saving," he stressed, "is one of the greatest contributions women can make toward winning the war. So far, we haven't been called upon to make many sacrifices. But they must come."

Greatly concerned over the American people's unrealistic attitude toward the war, he said he did not think they were as conscious of the gravity of the war as they should be—specially in the middle parts of the country.

"After the attack on Pearl Harbor," he said, "people were shocked into a realistic war attitude, but I am afraid they have settled again into a too comfortable viewpoint."

Urging all possible help to Russia, Mr. Batt is of the opinion that Russia will not stop fighting as long as there is a Nazi on its soil. And he thinks the Nazis will be there for some time to come. "And to Russia," he went on, "is a very real part toward winning the war."

Boys Club Official Speaks

Preceding Mr. Batt's talk, Max Farrington, director of physical activities of the Metropolitan Boys Club, gave a resume of his work.

Mrs. Preston Delano, of the voluntary services of the civilian defense, told of plans to serve lunches for Army and Navy workers in the vacant space near the Lincoln Memorial in the spring.

Mrs. Phillip Sidney Smith reported that in her campaign for books, which is still on, that a total of 43,219 had been collected.

Mrs. Henryk Arctowski was voted into membership of the club. A motion, introduced and passed by the club, urged that "a legislative committee be empowered to work for adequate public-health funds for the District."

Miss Blanche Polkinhorn spoke on the National Symphony Orchestra drive for funds. Mrs. Lawrence Martin, president of the club, presided.

Identification of Children

A Nation-wide system of registration and identification of every child in the United States was urged recently by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in a petition sent from headquarters in Chicago to the Office of Civilian Defense in Washington.

Mrs. William Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg., president of the National Congress, in a letter incorporating the motion of the organization's executive committee, declared:

"From Europe's experience we know that air raids, sabotage, and other catastrophes to which the community may be exposed in time of war can cause the separation of children from their families.

"We believe this matter to be of such great national importance that we are petitioning the Office of Civilian Defense to establish a Nation-wide system that can be used by all communities and all defense councils, including a system of registration that would make it possible to reunite children with their parents and to locate relatives of children in case of death of parents."

Priorities Vex Artist Who Paints on Steel

Right off, you wouldn't think the difficulty in getting steel would be much of a drag on artists. And it isn't with most of them. But Buell Mullin is an especial kind of artist. She's worried by priorities.

In fact, unless something comes of her "praying and wishful thinking" she may have to stop doing the startling sort of work in which she is the one and only. She's down to a little piece of steel about the size of your wife's hand (unless the little woman is built like Man Mountain Dean).

The steel situation, as Mrs. Mullen explained yesterday, becomes something serious indeed with her. She does her painting on, of all things, steel, aluminum and other metals. As everybody knows, Uncle Sam is now using such items for other purposes.

Mrs. Mullen does a portrait or other subject by diamond-point incision on the metal, the incisions making hooks to hold the paint. Pigments are then applied and the result is something to hold your eyes and probably make you say two or three oh's and ah's.

Nelson Eddy on aluminum is one of Mrs. Mullen's jobs and it looks like anytime Eddy will step out of the rectangle and have a chat with you. This comes from the striking third-dimensional quality possible with the metal.

Included in Mrs. Mullen's works-on-metal to go on exhibit Sunday at the Smithsonian Institution are Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. George C. Marshall on steel, Gov. Lehman of New York on brittanium, Eugene Ormandy on chromium and a 6x18-foot mural, "Hong Kong Harbor" which will be hung in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Buell Mullen has been doing her work on metals since a decade ago, when she became "fed up" with canvas and began casting about for something to combine the old in art with the new world of industry.

Sergt. Harris, D. C. Native, Killed In Philippines

Relatives of Technical Sergt. Howell H. Harris, 39, a native of Washington, were notified by the War Department yesterday that he had been killed in action January 27 while serving with the Twentieth Pursuit Squadron in the Philippines.

Sergt. Harris

Sergt. Harris met his death on the birthday of the woman he was engaged to marry, Mrs. Ruth Olsen, of 2140 N Street Northwest, relatives said.

Born at Congress Heights, in the District, Sergt. Harris later lived with his family in Capitol Heights and in Arlington, Va., attending the public schools at both places.

He enlisted at the age of 18 and was serving his third tour of foreign duty. He was rated as an airplane mechanic. The officer was a member of Mount Clemens (Mich.) Masonic Lodge and of Mystic Lodge, No. 2, Knights of Pythias in Honolulu.

Sergt. Harris is survived by his father, Howell H. Harris, sr., of 245 Eighth Street Southeast; two brothers, Theodore Harris, 2606 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, and Charles Harris, Capitol Heights, Md., and five sisters, Miss Sarah Harris, Washington; Mrs. W. G. Bixler, Mrs. A. G. Gower, Mrs. L. S. Croft and Mrs. C. J. McGrew, all of Arlington.

McKeough Put Up For Senate Post

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Cook County Democratic central committee tonight indorsed Representative Raymond S. McKeough, of Chicago, for the party's Senatorial nomination in the April primary in Illinois.

The action was taken several hours after Mayor Edward J. Kelly, coleader of the huge Chicago Democratic organization, announced that he would not seek a seat in the Senate.

McKeough, 53, and serving his fourth term in Congress from the Second District on the city's South Side, has a record of Administration support on domestic and foreign policies.

Frills to Go

Priorities Put a Crimp In Fashions

By Amy Porter

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 5.—Priorities were spotlighted in fashion shows today for men and women.

The men proposed to save material by abolishing lapels and pocket flaps and vests while the women proposed an ingenious use of substitute materials.

Men Go in for Daring

The men's clothes, presented by the Merchant Tailors and Designers Association, made up for scarcity of material by an abundance of daring cut and color.

The young man's "wartime business suit" in a shadow-plaid worsted was neat and somewhat gaudy with its collarless, lapelless neckline, its flapless pockets, its tight cuffless trousers, colorful shirt.

Definitely gaudy was the gentleman's siren suit in a good loud black and white check overplaided with red. The front zipper is supposed to make it easy for a man to jump into the suit within two seconds after an air raid alarm sounds.

Then There's the Convoy Coat

The convoy coat, popularized by Prime Minister Churchill, was adapted to civil life in an all-purpose suit made of lightweight covert cloth in navy blue. With it, a brim-up blue Homburg. This costume, the announcer said, would be ideal "for a flying trip to Washington and hours spent dashing in taxicabs from anteroom to anteroom."

One girl wore a yellow wool bicycle culotte shown among the G-10 numbers. This was one of a series of trousered costumes recommended for wartime girls.

Housing Project Street Named for Filipino Hero

Heroic defenders of Luzon, received formal recognition from the District Commissioners yesterday when they announced a principal street in McLean Gardens, defense housing project at Friendship, will be named after Jose Rizal, national Philippine idol.

Rizal has been called the "George Washington of the Philippines." He was leader of the revolt against Spain and was executed by the Spaniards on December 30, 1896, two years before Dewey's success at Manila Bay.

Both Commissioners Guy Mason and Charles W. Kutz are veterans of the Spanish-American War. In naming the new street after Rizal, the city heads acted on suggestions received from citizens.

Some 40 apartment dwellings for war workers are planned for Friendship on upper Wisconsin Avenue Northwest. The famous estate was sold to the Government last month by Evalyn Walsh McLean.

Boy Scout Week Opens Here Tonight

Boy Scout Week—marking the thirty-second anniversary of the founding of the American Scouting movement—will begin here tonight.

The khaki-clad youngsters will hold parents' night observances at many Scout meetings tonight. Many troops will place entries in the National Capital area council's window display contest stores here and in nearby counties. Scouts will be special guests at scores of religious services Sunday in Catholic and Protestant churches.

In a statement to the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America on the occasion, President Roosevelt said:

"The Boy Scouts have made, and will continue to make, an important contribution to the welfare of America's young manhood. The Nation is confident that the Boy Scouts stand ready to contribute to the national welfare in these critical hours."

Scouts Aid War Effort

And just as they did in the days of World War I, when the American Scouting movement was just 7 years old, the Scouts today are serving the country at war, their services ranging from poster distribution to blackout first aid.

Early in 1941, the Boy Scouts of America were urged to assume the task of distributing the posters advertising the sale of United States defense bonds and stamps. They put up 1,700,000 posters. Later they collected ten million pounds of scrap aluminium—80 per cent of all collected.

One of the first troops in the Washington area had its inception at Trinity Episcopal Church, Takoma Park, in 1911, under the leadership of Fred L. Harries. Troop 33, of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, as well as many other troops in and near the District, were the outgrowth of the Trinity Troop No. 21.

Troop 21 was at one time Takoma Park's only volunteer fire department, having been thus commissioned by the town council. Thirty-nine of that troop's members saw service in World War I. One was wounded.

James E. West, the Chief Scout executive, is a native Washingtonian and has filled that position since the opening of the first national office in New York City January 2, 1911. In that year, President Taft served as honorary vice president of the Boy Scouts of America.

Idea Came From London

Organization of the Boy Scouts of America came about because the late William D. Boyce, Chicago publisher, lost his way in a London fog.

Upon asking a lad how to reach his destination, Boyce was surprised to find that the lad agreed to escort him to the place. When Boyce offered him a coin, the boy replied:

"Thank you, sir, but I am a Boy Scout and we do not take tips for doing good turns."

Upon returning, Boyce lost no time in getting the American movement started through the efforts of a friend, Colin H. Livingstone; Dr. West and others. Staunch champion of the Scouting movement during the brief years he was spared at its beginnings was President Theodore Roosevelt, close friend of Dr. West. Testimony of his devotion to and interest in Scouting ideals is seen in the annual pilgrimage of Scouts to his grave at Oyster Bay, Long Island, on his birthday, October 27.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

MacLeish Must Pass On Official Speeches

Now the Cabinet officers and other top-flight Federal officials are being censored. Before any Federal official can make a speech he must have "clearance" from Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures. The bigwigs may not, like it, but they are orders—from the President. Top-ranking officials received letters this week from Steve Early, the President's press secretary, on the matter. Early said he would work with MacLeish on the clearance of speeches. MacLeish has been voluntarily working with many Federal officials, including the President, on their speeches so the experience won't be new to him.

The President was asked yesterday to "interest himself" in two vital Federal employe reforms. One is that all employes ordered to work overtime be paid for it; the other, that employe salaries be adjusted upward to meet the increased cost of living. The request was made in a letter from Luther C. Steward and Gertrude McNally, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of National Federation of Federal Employes, the largest of the "white-collar" employe unions. The President was urged to recommend legislation that would correct these conditions.

NFFE went on record for increased employe salaries to offset higher living costs at its convention last year. Administration spokesmen in Congress took the view that nothing should be done along this line until the price control bill had been approved. The bill is now law and during the months of debate on the price bill the cost of living has skyrocketed. Salaries of the vast majority of private employes have been raised but the Federal employe has been left holding the bag, so to speak.

War Department urgently needs tabulating machine operators. The jobs pay $1440. If you can qualify, go to Room 5035 of the new Railroad Retirement Board Building at the foot of the Capitol. It is the placement office for the quartermaster general . . . Fowler Hamilton is chief of the new War Frauds Unit at Justice . . . Many employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are boycotting the agency cafeteria . . . George Washington University is arranging for employes who are transferred with decentralized agencies to continue their studies at their new locations . . . Tom Harris, former law clerk to Chief Justice Stone, has been appointed assistant general counsel of FCC.

'Pool' Critics Answered

War Department yesterday answered critics of its "pool" system of recruiting employes by merely explaining that it was now a vast agency with a huge job to do and lots of people are needed to do it. In June, 1940, there were 7045 civilian employes there. Today there are 33,016. Last month 4500 new employes were placed on the pay roll. In one day, January 20, 669 new employes were put to work. The personnel division recently received an order for 2000 clerical workers, to be filled at the rate of 50 a day. Under the "pool" system, the personnel needs of the department are anticipated a month ahead . . . the employes are brought here, assigned to the "pool" where they are given a few days to get accustomed to Government routine before they are assigned to work.

It seems to be forgotten, but the Senate has a standing committee to investigate the Civil Service system and that committee may swing into action if it becomes clear that the House will launch an inquiry into the efficiency of Federal workers. Committee chairman is Senator Ellender, of Louisiana. Serving with him are Senators Johnson, of Colorado; Truman, of Missouri; Mead, of New York, and Bridges, of New Hampshire. The committee has no funds and it has not held a meeting in months.

Uncle Sam has opened another school here. The training is free and the Government will pay you while you learn, if you can qualify as a student. Women college graduates with degrees in physical education are needed. They will first be given six months of training at the Army Medical Center here, then six months training at Army hospitals. The trainee jobs pay $1440. On completion of the training courses, the trainees will be graduated to full-grade physiotherapy aides at $1800. The first thing to do is make application at the Civil Service Commission for a trainee job.

Would Honor MacArthur

Representative Luther Johnson introduced a bill in the House yesterday to change the name of Conduit Road to MacArthur Road in honor of the American general now making so heroic a stand in the Philippines. Besides, the Congressman argued, the name Conduit, advertises the location of the large water main running under the street.

Congress' Pension Act Faces Fight

Sentiment Grows To Repeal Provision Granting Annuities To Congressmen

Senate refusal to reconsider its approval of a bill granting annuities to certain civilians who helped build the Panama Canal yesterday focused attention on growing Capitol sentiment for repeal of the Congressional pension provision of the recently enacted Federal employe retirement law.

Observed Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who fought to have the Panama Canal bill reconsidered and also opposed Congressional pensions:

"It is very embarrassing for any member of Congress to refuse pensions to others if they voted pensions for themselves. That provision of the retirement law that makes members of Congress eligible for its benefits should be repealed as a matter of public obligation."

"It will be repealed," predicted Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, whose long tenure in the House would qualify him for one of the highest retirement annuities.

The Panama Canal bill would pay annuities running from 40 to 60 per cent of base pay to civilians, and, in some cases their widows, who were employed in connection with construction of the canal three years or more. Byrd told the Senate that over 3000 persons would receive benefits which would cost the Government 14 million dollars.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, took the floor meanwhile to defend the action of Congress in voting pensions for its members. There is no reason, he said, why legislators should not be allowed pensions the same as other Government workers.

Many members of Congress, it was reported, have been severely criticized by the voters back home, the principal criticism being aimed at wording of the law which would make it possible for some members to qualify for a pension upon payment of $1.39.

Ramspeck said he wrote the pension provision into the bill "at the request of numerous members" and added that he had no apologies to make.

Changes Asked In Unemployment Taxes, Benefits

Congress yesterday was asked by the District Unemployment Compensation Board to reduce the present unemployment compensation tax rate and to liberalize benefits of the Jobless Insurance Act.

Employers here are now paying a 2.7 per cent tax on their payrolls, but under pending legislation the rate would be reduced to one-half of 1 per cent.

The board's recommendations were presented in its annual report sent to Capitol Hill. It proposed to amend the act increasing benefits to eligibles from $18 a week for a period of 19 weeks to $20 a week for a maximum period of 20 weeks.

Hyattsville Bank Bandits Get 20 Years, Stiff Fines

Two men convicted of the $52,616 robbery of two Prince Georges County bank messengers at Hyattsville last September 25 yesterday were sentenced to serve terms of 20 years in Federal penitentiary and were fined $5000 each in Federal Court in Baltimore.

The sentences followed the overruling by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut of a motion for a new trial. The fines carry commitment for default which would require the men to serve the full terms.

The men, Hilliard Sanders and William Leo Keefe, were convicted January 8 of holding up the youthful messengers at gun point and taking satchels containing cash and securities, but a motion for a new trial stayed their sentences. Both men had pleaded innocent.

'Books for Buddies' Drive Nets 45,000

More than 45,000 books have been collected in the "Books for Buddies" campaign, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman, announced yesterday.

Books contributed in this victory book campaign will go for the use of soldiers in the armed services.

Driver Freed In Boy's Death; Two Injured

Arthur Cooper, 22-year-old bakery salesman, of 2523 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was acquitted of a negligent homicide charge by a Police Court jury yesterday. He had been charged with the death of Vernon Phifer, 13, of the 500 block of N Street Northwest.

The Government had contended that Cooper caused the boy's death when he struck him with his automobile at Third and N Streets Northwest last June, while young Phifer was crossing the intersection on a crosswalk.

Through his attorney, Daniel B. Maher, Cooper admitted that he had struck the boy, but asserted that Phifer had walked against the side of his car as he passed through the crosswalk.

Cooper's attorney further contended that the boy's death was not caused by this accident, but by a subsequent collision which occurred when Cooper's car was struck by another automobile while he was carrying Phifer to the hospital.

The case was tried before Judge George D. Neilson.

Meanwhile two persons were injured in an odd accident yesterday afternoon during rush hour.

A streetcar was proceeding north on Eighth Street, police reported, when it hit George W. Miller, 17, of Baltimore, who was standing on the platform. He fell against Zetta G. Uelsmann, 45, of 3321 McKinley Street Northwest.

Miller's face struck the woman's forehead. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital with possible concussion. The youth was treated for cuts on the face.

Treasurer Julian Sends $500 Gift To D. C. Red Cross

United States Treasurer William A. Julian sent the Washington Red Cross war fund to $295,948 yesterday with a personal gift of $500.

At the same time former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes issued a statement to spur on the lagging drive, saying: "The record of the American Red Cross is perhaps the noblest record of American achievement which we have."

Other large gifts received yesterday were G. B. Macke Corporation, $100; International Business Machines Corporation employes, $188.25; R. P. Andrews Paper Co., $102, and Tophams, Inc., $56.

Meantime, Mrs. Homer Case, chairman of booths, reported that Red Cross booths in theaters and stores are designed to supplement the regular contributions and that the small donations received there are very welcome.

26 Landlords Win Right To Raise Rents

Permission to raise maximum rent—established as of January 1, 1941 under the District Rent Control Act—was granted 26 landlords yesterday by Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

In two other cases, Cogswell authorized rent decreases in instances where apartments were furnished on the "rent freezing" date and are now leased unfurnished.

In one of the principal increase cases, Cogswell approved a petition by Herbert S. Ward, 901 Tower Building, requesting a $35 a month rent increase for premises at 1814 Newton Street Northwest. Ward explained that the property was in "deplorable condition" when he took it over June 5, 1941, and he spent $1200 in repairs. On the "freezing" date of January 1, 1941, rent received was $75 a month.

In all cases acted upon by Cogswell yesterday, tenants agreed to the changes.

Twenty-seven petitions for rent changes were filed by H. Grady Gore, 2100 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, representing the owners of the Drury Apartments, 3121 Mount Pleasant Street Northwest; Ritz Apartments, 1631 Euclid Street Northwest; Stanley Arms Apartments, 1125 Twelfth Street, Northwest, and an apartment at 921 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

Protest Backed Against U. S. Use Of Kramer School

Support of a mass protest against use of the new Kramer High School for Federal offices was voted last night by the Washington Highlands Citizens Association. The rally is scheduled for Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Anacostia High School auditorium.

The unit called on the District authorities to take steps for the clearance of rodents from Shepherd Park, between Second Street Southwest and Bolling Field.

Mrs. Frank W. Woodsmall was elected treasurer to succeed Alden Erickson, who was recently called into active Navy service. Mrs. K. J. Bartlett was named chairman of a newly-created waste-salvage committee.

Emergency D.C. Dwelling Cash Allotted

$18,900,000 to Pay For 4500 Units; Sites to Be Acquired At Once, Palmer Says

President Roosevelt yesterday allocated $18,900,000 to the speedy construction of 4500 emergency dwelling units in the Washington area.

The amount came from the 300 million dollar emergency appropriation made available in December to meet housing needs wherever the rapidly expanding war effort "is seriously overtaxing existing facilities."

Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer, announcing the allocation, said immediate steps would be taken to acquire sites and start construction.

"This will partially relieve the housing situation in the Capital while work on the 50 million dollar Lanham Act amendment to provide 10,000 dwelling units and accompanying public utilities is proceeding in Congress," he said.

To Be Built By ADA

The new 4500 homes will be built and managed by the Alley Dwelling Authority and will be of the removable type, Palmer announced, so they can remain as permanent structures or be moved to other locations after the war is over.

In general, he said, the effort will be to locate the homes within easy access to temporary and permanent office buildings where war workers are employed. Shelter rents in all units will be at rates within reach of workers earning $2000 a year or less.

Many of them will be prefabricated outside Washington, he said, and assembled on sites here. Some will be single homes, some twin dwellings and some row houses. Between 70 and 80 per cent of them will contain two or three bedrooms, with the balance having one bedroom. They will meet all standards set by the Federal Housing Administration for its 25-year financing plan, he declared, and "will add to the attractiveness of any area in which they will be located."

The WPA in a release yesterday pointed out Washington is not by itself in a crowded housing condition. A total of 111 defense areas are facing serious housing shortages, it was declared.

Conference Opens Today

"Public Housing During the War and Post-War Periods" will be the principal theme of the annual National Public Housing Conference held today at the Washington Hotel.

Both official and nonofficial leaders in housing will participate in the program, Mrs. Mary K. Simkhovitch, president, announced.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah; Leon H. Keyserling, acting administrator of United States Housing Authority; Louis H. Pink, State Superintendent of Insurance for New York, and Coordinator Palmer will be among the speakers.

The United Federal Workers of America, the C. I. O. union of Government employes, yesterday suggested that attention be no longer distracted from the grave housing crisis in Washington by such "frivolous proposals as the suggestion of a curfew for Government girls."

"Such publicity," it was declared, "doubtless is appreciated by the voters back home, but it will not provide housing for the District of Columbia."

Branview Valley Civic Group Chairmen Named

The Branview Valley Civic Association announced yesterday that Albert Obert had been named chairman of the association's defense salvage committee and that T. G. Gardner had been appointed to head a committee for the study of the Brookings Institution's report on Montgomery County's government.

'Barretts of Wimpole Street'

SCENE FROM PLAY—Eldredge Grant, as Robert Browning, reads poetry to Elaine Pack, portraying Elizabeth Browning. They are cast in "Barretts of Wimpole Street," to be staged tonight and tomorrow night at the Church of the Latter Day Saints, Sixteenth and Columbia Road Northwest. Curtain: 8 p. m.

Postlude By Ray C. B. Brown

Mignon Spence as Violetta Makes First Appearance Here

Fortune Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in Verdi's "La Traviata" on Thursday night in the National Theater. The cast:
Violetta Valery.....Mignon Spence
Alfredo Germont....Eugene Conley
Giorgio Germont.....Ivan Petrov
Flora Bervoix.....Louise Warren
Baron Douphol.....Fausto Bozza
Conductor, Carlo Peroni.

Mignon Spence, another American singer making a first appearance with the San Carlo Opera Company during its Washington engagement, sang the role of Violetta last evening in "La Traviata" and was well received by the large audience assembled to witness Verdi's 89-year-old work. The performance, excellently paced and dramatically unified, had upon it the Carlo Peroni stamp of authority, and the collaboration of the company was again an important factor in the vitality of the action. There is satisfaction in knowing that artistic standards of this kind are maintained by our oldest operatic touring organization.

BROWN

With reluctance one reports that Miss Spence has not the vocal equipment adequate for the role she essayed. Her light soprano voice is a pleasant one to hear and it has been well schooled; her stage presence is appealing in the character and she is comely to the eye. But her voice showed weakness under the strain of fioriture, partly the fault of breath control and partly of insecure placement. There was not sufficient strength in the tone for the dramatic passages to achieve their poignancy. Flexibility and delicacy are not enough for the role, which demands the pure sustained quality of tone and the steadiness of control which Lucille Meusel can command.

Eugene Conley deepened one's impression of his promise, based upon his debut on Monday in "Rigoletto." He sang Alfredo's lines with a refined lyricism that was carried into his most sonorous notes. His delivery showed a constant awareness of tone production and a youthful mastery of bel canto in the real Italian style.

Ivan Petrov, who has always been a dependable Germont on his visits here, was at the top of his form last evening. His reading of "Di Provenza il Mar" had a velvety quality of tone rare in a baritone of his dramatic power, and the aria, for all its poor content of poetry, became a thing of beauty. One must say a word also for Louise Warren's enjoyable singing in the secunda donna role of Flora, which is so often scamped and overlooked.

The minor parts were all handled with neatness and competence, and thanks to Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux, the dances in the second act had the professional touch which one often misses in this episode.

District Gas Rates Below Average

F.P.C. Reports Capital Well Down On List of 199 Cities Of Over 50,000

Wide variation in gas rates from community to community, with Washington rates generally below the average, were revealed yesterday by a comprehensive report of the Federal Power Commission on natural and manufactured gas rates in 199 American cities with more than 50,000 population.

The report was issued in response to a request of the United States Senate and was published as a Senate document.

Commenting on the report, Power Commissioner Basil Manly stated that he expected that rates which were shown to be "out of line" would be adjusted "downward."

Differences among 87 cities served with natural gas ranged up to nearly 900 per cent. Among 24 cities served a mixture of natural and manufactured gas (including Washington), differences ranged up to 282 per cent; 89 cities served manufactured gas, up to 214 per cent.

Most variation was revealed in rates charged to smaller users.

Users in this category who consume 10 therms (heating units) a month would be charged $1.44 in Washington, compared with a low of 23 cents in Huntington, W. Va., where natural gas is sold, and a high of $4.46 in Spokane, Wash., where manufactured gas is sold.

Washington is served with a mixture of 27.6 per cent natural and 72.4 per cent manufactured gas.

Its 10 therms "typical bill" ranked eighth among users of mixed gas with the Buffalo, N. Y., charge of 72 cents providing the low, and the York, Pa., rate of $2.75 providing the high. A typical bill for consumers using 25 therms of gas (for cooking and water heating) was $3.28 in Washington, also eighth among mixed gas users, with Buffalo's $1.81 the low and East St. Louis, Ill., $5 the high.

Consumers using 100 therms, indicating they heat their homes and water with gas, would have to pay $10.78 a month in Washington, compared with the charge of $6.30 for mixed gas in Louisville, Ky., the low charge, and $15.04 in East Chicago, Ind., the mixed gas high.

A commission spokesman explained that the low rates in several areas were due to the proximity of gas production resources.

'Sundown,' at the Palace, Is Unfortunately Diffused

Bruce Cabot, George Sanders, Gene Tierney And Able Cast Lost in an African Script; 'Main Street on the March' Tops Short Reels

"SUNDOWN." Walter Wanger's picturization for United Artists of the story of Barre Lyndon, adapted to the screen by the author, featuring Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot and George Sanders, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Harry Carey, Joseph Calleia, Reginald Gardiner, Carl Esmond, Marc Lawrence, Jeni Le Gon Smmett Smith, Dorothy Bainbridge and Gilbert Emory. Directed by Henry Hathaway. At Loew's Palace Theater.

ECHOES OF THE WAR penetrate the heart of Africa in this none too facile screen adaptation of a popular magazine story of gun-running, native insurrection, hard-pressed British outposts and spy activities at their grimmest. It should be a far more plausible, exciting and powerful picture than it is.

Opening sluggishly with an evident intent to establish some sort of "atmosphere" of African mysticism, tribal rites and superstitions—with aboriginal chants and a great beating of tom-toms as their familiar symbols—the filmed story is interminably long in getting to the point. Even when it approaches its hazy destination, the relationships of the characters, their individual and collective purposes, and the manner in which they are to be achieved, lack that incisive clarification essential to a compact and hard-driving adventure play of war, revolt and heroic courage.

Toward the end of the play the murders, abductions, ambuscades, treachery and valiance reach a reasonably high pitch of explosive action—and then are utilized principally as an excuse to expound a seemingly sound philosophy of geopolitical strategy and permit a bishop to extol the heroic dead—the most valiant of whom was his son—from the pulpit of a London cathedral. Thus, finally, it is revealed that the message of "Sundown" is that the Church and the Army are the basic foundations of human civilization. The Church welds it together and the Army protects and defends it.

It is regrettable that Producer Walter Wanger permitted a loosely written and diffused script to force him to say the important things he had to say through the medium of "Sundown" in the form of interpolated speeches obviously introduced for that sole purpose—like the closing pulpit remarks, for instance, which mark Sir Cedric Hardwicke's only appearance in the picture, in the role of the bishop. These vital conclusions should have been expressed in terms of the film's dramatic action—which emphatically they are not. The film is confusion instead of conviction.

Able Cast Combats Inept Play

The capability of the cast is such as to give rise to false hopes of such a picture as ought to do them justice. Bruce Cabot, George Sanders, Harry Carey, Reginald Gardiner and Joseph Calleia comprise a quintet on the side of international honor that deserves a drama of greater integrity. Carl Esmond, as the sly enemy agent, and Marc Lawrence, as the leader of rebellion among the natives, are the beneficiaries of assignments that are a little more clear-cut than any of the others. Gene Tierney, as the only feminine member of the cast of vital importance to the obscure plot, makes a stunning "mystery woman," of supposedly chi-chi origin, upon whom no great dramatic burdens are imposed. In taking full advantage of the helpfulness of picturesque outdoor scenery, Mr. Wanger has quite maintained the reputation he has enjoyed ever since "Stage Coach" was made doubly memorable by the striking effectiveness of its photographic effects.

Foremost among the screen auxiliaries on the new bill at the Palace is "Main Street on the March," a "documentary" that gets down to the effect of the war on Mr. Average Man and his wife and children and their reactions to it. Filmed in large part in a neighboring Maryland city, where it recently was accorded its world premiere, "Main Street' must take rank with the best of its kind. A touch of playful and rousing humor will be found in the Tom and Jerry color cartoon, "Fraidy Cat," in which one of Mickey's remote cousins demonstrates how tough a small mouse can make it for a fatuous feline. The newsreel, including shots of the President's birthday celebrations in Washington, completes the bill.

For the second time in several hundred weeks Capitol Theater employees yesterday morning took it easy on what is traditionally opening day at the F Street house. For this they had Robert Taylor and Lana Turner to thank, as well as a forcefully written film by John Lee Mahin and James Edward Grant, "Johnny Eager." They also had the dominant portion of last week's stage bill to thank, a program on which Ray English is replacing Dean Murphy and Reed and Mack take the spot of the Hollywood blondes, but whose balance remains the same.

Teaming of such sock personalities as Taylor and Turner is the undoubted reason for this unusual holdover at the Capitol. Taylor has never proved his acting ability more effectively than he does as "Johnny Eager," the Turner girl is more strikingly beautiful than she was in "Ziegfeld Girl" and, since this is their first costarring effort, there is the added quality of novelty that makes for added interest.

Character delineation makes for more variation than the plot might suggest. Johnny Eager is a confirmed criminal, a young fellow out on parole posing as an honest taxi driver but actually leading the life of a highly successful gangster. He interests a debutante student of sociology and ultimately places her in the position of a murderess. The strong, hot-blooded characters both portray give great vitality to the piece, while two other figures are equally oustanding: Van Heflin, playing Johnny's closest friend, a role written with superb insight and played with equal skill, and Edward Arnold in a sympathetic but virile part.

New to Washington vaudeville is Ray English, stepping into the spot occupied on last week's bill by Dean Murphy. Youthful English takes falls that must up his insurance premiums to a dizzy scale, dances in a style reminiscent of but different from Paul Draper and has a sense of the humorous that got over neatly with his first local audience.

Cass Daley's wonderous manslaughter of songs and microphone technique is as cyclonic and effective as ever, giving a challenge of no mean proportion to the unfamiliar act which follows hers—Carmen Amaya and her group in South American dancing and music.

Special Newsclips At Trans-Lux

Rushed to Washington by plane, special newsreel clips of vital interest to the National Captial yesterday were added to the bill at the Trans-Lux Theater.

Most eagerly awaited of these are the first actual camera shots of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his hard-bitten little Army, repulsing Japanese attacks on the Bataan Peninsula in the Philippines. Also among the films are the first pictures released of the stab-in-the-back attack on Pearl Harbor, launched by the Nips on Sunday, December 7. Of still more recent headline importance are views of the United States Navy's surprise attack on the Marshall and Gilbert Islands in mid-Pacific.

—HEDDA HOPPER—

Some of Them Can Keep a Secret

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 5.—When I talked with Anne Shirley, who, with her baby has moved back into her own home again because that was part of the property settlement), she said, "No, Hedda, I'm afraid there can be no reconciliation with John Payne." "But Anne, it was all so sudden!" Anne replied. "It's something that's been going on for many months. But I was hoping we could work it out together, and continue our married life. And if we had done that, no one would have known that we had ever had any differences of opinion. But it couldn't be done." You can only be sorry it had to happen, but you have to admire tremendously a girl who has carried on, and given no hint to anyone, not even her mother, that she was having domestic trouble. That isn't the way we usually do it in our town, and she should be commended. Those who have separated, kissed and made up, and separated again, and those who are about to do it, for a lot of cheap publicity, could take a lesson from Miss Shirley for dignity and honesty.

ANNE SHIRLEY

When Wes Ruggles, jr., aged 9, came to visit his mother, Arline Judge, on the "Wildcat" set, they let him call "Action. Camera!—and Cut!"—and now he wants to get a horse and become a Western actor.

Emil Ludwig has done his version of "Columbus and Isabella," and has sent a copy of the book with this written on the flyleaf — "Columbus discovered America, Ludwig discovered Columbus, Goldstone discovered Ludwig — but who iscovered Goldstone?" Well, I'll bite—who?

Because Joan Fontaine has gotten into the habit of calling her husband "Old Boy," it almost cost their new Filipino houseboy his job. He though it was a special honorable term, and came into a room full of guests and announced, "Dinner is ready, Old Boy!"

Alfred Hitchcock loves to watch surprise on other people's faces. Well, the one on his was funny when the chair on the set collapsed beneath his weight. He huffed and puffed, and finally, getting to his feet, yelled, "Sabotage!"

I wonder if the shortage of hair has caused Van Heflin, Ronnie Colman and Charlie Chaplin to grow their own beards. And I'm asking why—when their faces look so pretty undressed.

It's good news to all the generous-minded persons in Hollywood that, through the offices of Norman H. Davis, national Red Cross chairman, they won't have to pay income tax on money received for special broadcasts or pictures if that money is given to the Red Cross. This should have been done years ago.

Dinner on the Wing!

New York, Feb. 5.

An official of the carrier-pigeon division of the Signal Corps, stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J., was startled to discover a message brought back by one of his prize pigeons. It was addressed to the servant of Gen. Deusen, the commander of the post, and contained such words as "Peas," "Turkey," "Jello.'" The expert decoders were unable to translate it—to read anything into it beyond a dinner-menu . . . The Gen. and Mrs. Van Deusen had attended an exhibit at Governors Island. A Fort Monmouth carrier-pigeon was part of the exhibit, and the General's wife was asked what message she'd like to send back. The first thing she thought of was the menu. By the time they reached home the meal was prepared.

ANN SHERIDAN

Eugene O'Neill has finished another new play. It will be brought back to New York within the next few days . . . The United States Navy is preparing to publish 500,000 copies of a book about the Navy, fully illustrated, to sell at 10 cents a copy . . . Maury Maverick, now back at his job in the Office of Price Administration, lost 50 pounds during his hospital siege . . . Irving Jaffee, the Olympic ice-skating champ, who has been selling ice skates these past few years, will become the producer of an ice show. Steel priorities made it impossible for Jaffee to continue the manufacture of his skates.

George Brent and Ann Sheridan returned to Hollywood after an unusual, unforgettable honeymoon trip. They went to La Quinta, an isolated place near Palm Springs. The only cottage available for the honeymoon couple bore the sign "San Quentin" . . . And there were only a few other guests at La Quinta. But one of them was a beautiful lady who once was Brent's financee.

Sally Benson, the author of "Junior Miss," is going to Hollywood to work at M.-G.-M. for six weeks . . . Sinclair Lewis has resumed writing his novel, on which he began a year ago. He had to throw away only half of the work already completed. . . . 16 mm. movie film will be the next powerful medium to be employed in propagandizing our war effort. These films will be exhibited in schools, churches and other places of assembly . . . A Detroit advertising official tendered a $100 bill to a captain of waiters at the Stork Club. "Here, take it," he insisted. "I just want to know how it feels to hand out such a bill when I'm sober."

Walter Clark's best-seller, "The Ox-Bow Incident," will be made into a movie by Twentieth Century-Fox . . . Eddie Cantor offered a fabulous fee to Benny Goodman to play one clarinet solo on his radio program—but Benny refused, explaining "I am now a concert artist" . . . Byron Price, the censor, told a group of Congressmen that the best results are obtained by the self-censorship imposed upon all the publications . . . Regarding the rank of the various news offices, this is the set-up: Price's authority can control all foreign broadcasts outranking Col. Donovan's, except where South America is concerned. There, the Rockefeller Committee dominates. Where domestic affairs are concerned MacLeish's office and Price's office consult each other, for their authority is equal.

Olivia De Havilland, who broadcast last week on the "Plays for America" program, confesses that she isn't satisfied with the job she did. "I couldn't forget the camera," she explains, "and turned my three-fourth profile to the microphone" . . . Irving Berlin has been writing so many government songs that his wife calls him "a human juke-box." "I wish that were true," says Irving, "because a song must be good before it reaches the juke-box" . . . When a distinguished-looking ringsider at the Hurricane said he'd like to see Cabot and Dresden after the show, the dancers thought he was a talent scout and did their trickiest and most dangerous whirling routines. "I'm from the insurance company," the man later identified himself. "After seeing you work, I'm sorry, but we can't issue that accident insurance to you."

Yale Makes Freshmen Eligible for Sports

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation various members of The Post Sports Department will write his column.)

By Tony Neri

The District fight fan, a hardy soul, may well sympathize with Mother Hubbard's dog. With the boxing calendar here mirroring a blank expression at this writing, the picture, bare as that famous canine cupboard, appears doleful, and no immediate light promises a beaming outlook.

NERI

The announcement of Promoter Joe Turner's quitting the game (his hundredth resignation) and the delay of the Uline management in naming a successor to Matchmaker Johnny Attell, will force the fan to find another outlet to give vent to the likes of "murder dat bum."

At a time when boxing should be flourishing, the sport is dormant, and unless something is accomplished to inoculate it, oblivion can be its only reward.

Since boxing's legalization locally in 1934, the road has been long and stormy. Promoter after promoter invaded the city, promising fights that would fetch the paying customers, only to have their enterprises fold up after a few anemic shows. Arriving here with high expectations, they eagerly left with regrets of empty pockets and their fistic dreams shattered.

The lone exception, Mike Jacobs, staged three shows here and managed to boast a substantial profit. And even he has called Washington a jonah as far as boxing is concerned.

Why this situation exists in Washington, while other cities less populated thrive as boxing centers, continues to be a puzzle to veteran promoters, especially to Joe Turner.

One would think the influx of the thousands of defense workers coming here for the Government and starving for recreation would increase the attendance at boxing shows, but that is not the case. Their attendance and the attendance of most of Washington has been conspicuous by its absence.

Every Tom, Dick and Harry has advanced a theory why boxing is in such a lowly state here. Talk has been cheap, but as yet no action has been taken to cure the ailing game. The sport is in dire need of a Messiah, who he is and where he is at this writing nobody knows. But let's hope he makes an appearance soon. Because it looks as if Paper Turner means it this time when he says he's quitting the game. And with Lee Perrin (no relation to the A-1 sauce people) sitting as quiet as a country hen, it is improbable that boxing will again be housed at Uline Arena. The arena management has apparently found wrestling a more lucrative sport (?), and such being the case, boxing is out.

There was a time when depression hit the boxing game, the energetic Ray Alvis would resurrect himself and stage a show. But Ray is a very busy man now and it is doubtful if any boxing proposition sounds as good to him today as does that cash register out at Boulevard Farms, where Alvis is playing a staccato on its keyboard. Business is very good, we've been told, and Brother Alvis is staying close to the job.

Our Messiah to the boxing game would have to be a composite of Alvis, Turner and Uncle Mike Uline. We believe with Alvis' energy and conniving, Turner's patience and Uline's shrewdness, our boxing impresario could make a go of it here. Of course, we could use Uline's Arena. That would help, we are sure.

With Alsab dominating the racing headlines, other eligible candidates for the forthcoming Kentucky Derby have been sadly overlooked. With due respects to Alsab, there's still another colt around who'll give that worthy a run for it when the band strikes up "My Old Kentucky Home" on Derby Day. He is Bless Me, a "B" horse from Col. Bradley's barn. A son of Sickle, Bless Me is bred for that mile and a quarter distance at Churchill Downs. He'll be doing his running when he charges down that stretch and makes the other horses appear as if tied to the eighth pole.

Bless Me is the colt who ran Alsab to a photo finish in the Walden Stakes at Pimlico last November. The chart's notes on the race tells a very interesting story . . . "Alsab was placed to punishment on the stretch turn to take the lead, but tired suddenly inside the last eighth pole and had to be vigorously ridden in the last sixteenth to stall off Bless Me. The latter . . . moved up readily nearing the last turn, drove up on the inside to draw abreast of the leaders, was bothered . . . recovered quickly . . . finished wearing down the winner with every stride." The Walden is a mile and sixteenth race.

Remember Bless Me, Col. Bradley's fifth Kentucky Derby winner!

ON DiMAGGIO'S SIDE IN THE SALARY QUESTION

New York, Feb. 5.—Joe DiMaggio goes to Florida tomorrow with his unsigned contract in his pocket. The contract calls for a lot of money. That it doesn't call for enough is obvious. If it did it would have been signed in a minute and the best player in baseball would now be safely in the Yankee fold.

CONSIDINE

The Yankees have asked DiMaggio not to discuss his 1942 salary with newspapermen. But two sources reasonably close to the situation assure us that the Yankees have opened the bidding at $40,000. That represents a $2500 raise for DiMaggio. It's a cinch he doesn't think that's enough of a raise to reward him for his 1941 season. Our same sources tell us that he will demand $50,000.

Joe's on a peculiar spot. So are a lot of lesser diamond stars. Even in peacetime a holdout always had two strikes on him—the two strikes being that he didn't have the average American's constitutional right to say, "Okay, if you won't pay me what I'm worth, I'll go to work for some team that will." This kind of bondage still holds true. But the 1942 holdout loses more than those primary rights that have always been denied him. Up until now, the holdout usually had the public on his side. Now, we suspect, he will lose the public.

The Service Men Will Hold the Holdouts

His howling dissatisfaction, however just, will seem trite compared to the plight of hard-working soldiers and sailors who are cheerfully risking their lives for less money than a ballplayer who would charge to step on a grape. We've already seen a few squawks in the readers' corner from Pro Bono Publico and his idiot nephew. Just A Fan, excoriating this or that ballplayer for not joining the Fellers, Greenbergs, Mulcahys, etc.

There's going to be more of that. It's inevitable. And the fact that the average ballplayer is shrewd enough to know that he must maintain cordial relations with the fans, and do nothing to alienate their affection, makes it almost certain that out and out holdouts will be few and far between this winter and spring. The boys will be afraid to do too much bellyaching—a fact which will delight more than one baseball owner. We're betraying no trade secret when we tell you that there are owners who are not above sandbagging a player into line, under the cloak of the national emergency, and pocketing the money saved.

Of course there's no true parallel between the salary of a ballplayer and the salary of a soldier. One does one job; one does another. If soldiers are reduced to $10 a month, and exposed to even more dangers, it doesn't logically follow that ballplayers who make money for their bosses must be knocked down, too.

Joe Was a Half-Million-Dollar Man

Personally we think Joe DiMaggio, to use the outstanding example, made as much money for the Yankees last year, when he was paid $37,500, as Babe Ruth made for the Yankees when he was paid $80,000. We think Joe made considerably more for the Yanks than Hank Greenberg made for the Tigers, though Hank was drawing down $50,000 when the Army claimed him as a single man with no dependents. Though he is the best, Joe has never been the highest paid ballplayer.

Few ballplayers have ever had more obvious proof of their exact value than DiMaggio. We've found no dissenting opinion among managers, owners and ballplayers to sway us from our belief that DiMaggio personally and individually was responsible for the Yankees' 1941 pennant. His 56 game batting streak lifted the club from the despair of fifth place to the dash and verve of its series victory. Thanks to that streak, and that streak only, the Yanks became a gang of crazy kids again, hell-bent for election.

Just as important is the fact that over that 56-game span, Joe showed conclusively that he was one of the game's few individual drawing cards since Ruth. He filled seats in the St. Louis Browns park that had not been filled for years. He drew one of the biggest crowds Washington ever had the day he broke George Sisler's modern record for safe batting in consecutive games. Conservatively, he alone must have created a half a million dollars worth of additional business for the Yanks. Perhaps it is a coincidence, perhaps it isn't; but the Yanks are no longer being peddled.

Baseball is in for a prosperous year. The President has given it the green light. More night games will create a big lift in attendance. Fans who have been broke for years, have money again.

'Big Three' Rivals Also In Accord

Football Practice To Be Started on Any Date; Frosh Eligible At Summer Session

By the United Press

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 5.—Yale University announced tonight that, in conjunction with its "Big Three" rivals, Harvard and Princeton, it was modifying, for the duration of the war, the "three presidents' agreement" so as to make freshmen eligible for varsity competition and the permit the starting of football practice on any date.

Freshmen will be eligible for varsity teams with the start of the summer session July 6. Yale, in company with most colleges, is conducting summer sessions so that its students, most of them eligible for military service, may obtain their degrees sooner.

The announcement said the "Big Three" hoped to continue intercollegiate competition so far as war conditions permit, but would not extend it to the summer session except for possible occasional contests with nearby colleges or military camp teams.

The athletic agreement among the presidents of the three schools signed January 1, 1923, set September 15 as the earliest date to start football practice. Harvard and Princeton abandoned this in recent years, starting practice a few days earlier, and Yale's practice opened September 13 last fall.

The hosts ran up a 23-8 margin at half time and were never threatened. Johnny Lookabaugh tallied almost half the winners' points, accounting for 17.

Rifle Association To Discuss War's Effect on Sport

What is to happen to rifle and pistol shooting as a sport during the war will be the subject for discussion today when the board of directors of the National Rifle Association meets at the Mayflower Hotel.

With ammunition such a definite war necessity, the N. R. A. faces the prospect of curtailing its tournament schedule, though officials believe the value of rifle and pistol firing for training may allow numerous events to go on as scheduled.

The association, it was announced, may again offer its 250,000 membership to the country as auxiliary police.

Business of the N. R. A. will be taken up at the main meeting, starting at 2:30, after which the body's annual banquet will be held at 7:30.

Western Open, $5000 Purse, Starts Today

By the Associated Press

Snead, with a 6 under par 65 practice round to his credit over the Phoenix Country Club course, has yet to cash in on the tournament circuit in the West. He had the rich Los Angeles Open in his grasp last month but blew it with a heartbreaking 8 on the last hole.

Hogan Usual Threat.

Benny Hogan captured the Los Angeles and San Francisco Opens to prove he's a threat for a repeat triumph as the Nation's most consistent golfer.

This tournament used to belong to Guldahl. He carried off the title three years in a row, along with the National Open the last two years of his domination of the game in 1937-38.

Great Lakes Naval Station Defeats Kansas U., 53 to 37

Kansas City, Feb. 5.—Hitting their shots with remarkable consistency, the sailors of the Great Lakes Naval Station defeated Kansas University, Big Six Conference co-leader, 53 to 37, in an exhibition basketball game tonight before 5700 spectators.

Sailing into a 26-15 lead at the half after connecting with over 30 per cent of their tosses, the Navy men waltzed away with ease, never letting the Phog Allen Jayhawks come within six points of their lead.

Late W.-L. Rally Stops St. John's Five, 39-37

Tiahrt, Phillips Sink Winning Baskets; Cadets Perfect at Foul Line

Baskets by Maynard Tiahrt and Bobby Phillips in the closing minutes of play gave the Washington-Lee High Generals a 39-37 upset victory over a highly favored St. John's Prep five last night on the General's court at Ballston, Va. The loss broke a five-game winning streak for the Johnnies.

Tiahrt, playing his first home game as captain, sank a beautiful set shot from midcourt to tie the count at 37-all and Phillips' snowbird which soon followed was the winning margin.

W.-L. went into the second quarter with an 8-7 lead but the Prepsters, paced by Capt. George Hughes, who captured high scoring honors with 17 tallies, and Sleepy Thompson, who made 12 marks, staged a rally to gain a 19-18 margin at halftime. The tide seesawed through the third period and ended in a 27-27 deadlock.

Leafs, Wings Battle to 3-3 Deadlock

By International News Service

Detroit, Feb. 5.—Seventy minutes of "bang-up" hockey failed to produce a decision tonight and a 3-3 deadlock marked the Olympia meeting of the Toronto Maplelefs and the Detroit Redwings before 8054 fans.

Turning in a sensational performance as he was brought up from Indianapolis to replace injured Johnny Mowers, Goalee Joe Turner sparkled in the overtime period with two miraculous saves for Detroit.

Rangers Top Bruins, 4-1; Boost Lead

Rookie Helps Hawks Stop Montreal

Montreal, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The Chicago Black Hawks took a big gamble tonight in their National Hockey League game against the Montreal Canadiens by tossing in a young amateur goal tender to replace the injured Sam Lo Presti and won 4-3.

The goalie, Bill Dickie, backstop with the Montreal Pats of the Quebec Senior Amateur League, snared honors in the win with Bob Carse—called up from Kansas City to replace his injured brother, Bill. Carse rapped in the winning goal with only two minutes and eight seconds to go in the final stanza.

High School Double-Header Set Tonight

Just how much difference there is in top and bottom teams in public school basketball standings will be demonstrated tonight at Tech when Roosevelt, the undefeated leader, engages a winless Anacostia five at 7:30. A nightcap on the same pattern brings together the likewise winless forces of Tech and a Central club which is tied for third.

There is the possibility of an upset in each game, but the chances appear best in the finale. Tech, as a matter of fact, could come out on top fairly easily, considering its play so far.

Five straight times the Manual Trainers have been beaten to date, but in four of those setbacks the margin was three points or less. Thus the Trainers might be due a hot hand, or whatever it takes to win a close one.

Central, on the contrary, has played over its head in the opinion of experts as it captured three of its five starts. The Vikings bubble, which shrank with a loss to Wilson on Tuesday, could be burst by Tech tonight, leaving the big, rugged club from Clifton Street out of a playoff place.

Though Anacostia has scared the wits out of several contenders, Roosevelt doesn't figure to be even a little frightened in tonight's nightcap. It has the talent to win handily, sinking the Indians a little deeper in the cellar.

Nine other games mark today's scholastic card hereabouts, topped by outings on the part of Catholic Prep quints. St. John's plays host to Benedictine, of Richmond, in one afternoon battle and Georgetown Prep entertains Alexandria's G. W. High in another.

Virginia Beats Richmond, 36-24; Wiltshire Stars

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 5.—After trailing through six minutes of the second half an inspired University of Virginia basketball team piled up a 36-to-24 victory over the University of Richmond Spiders before 750 customers in the Cavalier Arena tonight.

Slippery Dick Wiltshire, the Cavaliers' clever southpaw, was all over the court in the second half after being held fairly well in check in the first period and sparked the often-defeated Cavaliers to an unexpected victory.

Shifting to a fast-breaking offense after failing to penetrate the Spider web earlier in the game, the Cavaliers passed the Richmonders at 19 to 18 after six minutes of play in the final period and were never headed.

Redskins' Ticket Deadline Feb. 9

The Washington Redskins management has announced that Monday, February 9, at 6 p. m. is the final date for 1941 season ticket holders to renew their seats for the coming campaign. No payment is due at this time, but seat holders must signify their intentions so that uncalled for tickets may be placed on general sale.

The same partial payment plan—calling for one-third payments on March 1, June 1 and August 1—will again be in effect this year.

All-America Alberts Seek Training Post

The Navy Department reported yesterday that "Frankie" Collins Albert, Stanford University All-America quarterback in 1940 and 1941, had applied for enrollment as a physical training instructor under the Naval Reserve aviation cadet program.

Albert, 21, who for three years was field general of the Stanford varsity, is a candidate for commission as an ensign. If appointed he will be assigned to one of four colleges which soon will be selected to serve as aviation cadet instruction centers.

O'Grady's 14 Points Lead Both Teams

Syracuse Wins 8th In Last 9 Starts; Hoyas Trail by 12 Points at Halftime

Special Dispatch to The Post

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Leading all the way with a speedy attack with which its opponent could not cope, an orange-jerseyed Syracuse quintet tonight vanquished Georgetown, 55 to 44, for its fifth straight victory and eighth triumph in its last nine starts.

While Capt. Francis O'Grady, of the Hoyas, carried off the game's individual scoring laurels with 14 points in a losing cause, the fast Syracusans showed a superior passing game and better-balanced scoring punch as they clearly displayed their supremacy.

Giant Gene Berger, Bob Shaddock and Joe Glacken sparked the Orange offensive with double scoring figures 13, 12 and 10, respectively, for Coach Lew Andreas' five which demonstrated more accurate shooting form than the Hoyas who appeared unable to find the range consistently.

Half Lead to Orange

Berger accorded Glacken strong support by amassing four baskets and a foul for nine points to help spark the fast Orange attack to a 33-21 edge at half time, as O'Grady was the only Hoya able to scare more than once from the field.

Baskets by Berger and Shaddock and a foul each widened the margin to 17 points when the second half began. Berger dropped in another free throw, but Lujack offset it with a gift toss.

O'Grady then found the range on a one-handed toss into the hoop, the first field goal of his team after the intermission. Lujack raced under the hoop for two points, but Di Pace scored similarly. Martin cut the lead to 13 points with a short shot from the floor and Engles' foul cut it to 12.

Teams Match Baskets

Stanton tapped in a rebound and Gabbianelli dribbled in to offset the Orange score, and with ten minutes to play, the Hoyas trailed 44-32. Shaddock counted on a pair of fouls, which was equalized by Lujack's set shot.

O'Grady once more sent an overhead shot through the mesh and this narrowed the home edge to 10 points with five minutes left to play. Di Pace tossed in a gift shot and Wilmott dribbled in for a basket, increasing the Orange advantage to 49-36.

Schmidli counted on a pair of fouls and Bornheimer's basket pared the issue to a matter of 9 points. Stanton sank a set shot and Syracuse was in front, 51-40, as two minutes remained.

Two baskets by Shaddock and one each by Gambianelli and Schmidli, were crowded into the final minute of play. The final score: Syracuse, 55; Georgetown, 44.

It's Quiet Now, But Wait 'Til Buck Gets His Contract

By the United Press

Hartsville, S. C., Feb. 5.—Louis (Buck) Newsom, whose pitching didn't exactly set the American League on fire last year, hasn't received his 1942 contract from Detroit yet, but he is all set to call the Tiger management some choice names if it contains that reported "awful slice of salary."

THE BOBO

"If I get a contract calling for a lot less money," he said, "I just want to say that I played on a mediocre club last season. Anyway I don't give a damn whether I play baseball any more or not."

"Why?" he was asked.

"That's my business," he responded.

City Talk Second As 9377 See Prep For Widener 'Cap; Allessandro Out

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 5.—Dropping 25 pounds from his previous race, when he had finished second to Eire at 7 furlongs, the Howe Stable's Cash Basis easily defeated a field that included five Widener Handicap eligibles in the 1-mile sixth event, best offering here today. Carrying 94 pounds, which included Apprentice Warren Mehrtens, the 4-year-old colt won by three lengths in 1:38 flat, the fastest time made for that distance this meeting.

Mrs. Louis Lazare's City Talk was a fast-closing second, another three lengths better than River Dvde Farm's Pomiva. Allessandro, the choice in a field of eight, faded back to fifth position. Cash Basis was an entry with Riding Light and returned $6.60.

Those in the race named for the rich Widener were City Talk, Pomiva, Allessandro, Riding Light and Arestino.

Commencement, under the lightest impost carried by any starter—91 pounds—held a very narrow lead over the ultimate winner for almost 6 furlongs. Then Cash Basis imposed his will upon that mare, bounding into a clear advantage and drawing out through the home lane. City Talk was slow to settle into stride but had no trouble running over all except the winner. Pomiva nosed out Commencement right on the wire.

Men and women who grew away from the sport will come back, for the exciting relaxation it offers. Team pay rolls already have been lightened by the induction of men like Greenberg, Feller, Travis, Lewis and the impending induction of several others who make good dough. Why, then, should the firms profit by letting it be known that it will be unpatriotic for players to fall back on their lone and traditional way of getting what they're worth—the holdout system?

This should have been Joe's peak season. It isn't in the book for him to repeat his 1941 performance, just as Ruth never again reached the 60-home-run mark that brought about his $80,000 salary in 1928. But we doubt if Joe will get what he wants. The war and its adjusted standards will keep his squawks down to a minimum, whereas in a peaceful time he would have had the full support of the public in any holdout siege he made. For rarely, if ever, has one man had a clearer claim to an exalted salary than has Jumping Joe—the $80,000 a year ballplayer who'll probably sign for half that sum.

New Oriole Players Here To Meet Eagles

Strengthened by a reorganization which has resulted in the signing of several players, the Baltimore Orioles will invade Riverside Stadium tonight to meet the Washington Eagles in an Eastern Hockey League game at 8:30 o'clock.

The Orioles, who have skated short all season with 10 to 12 players available, will have 14 or 15 on hand for tonight's game.

Baltimore rolled over River Vale in Baltimore last Sunday night, 7 to 1, and came back last Tuesday night to upset the New York Rovers on home ice, 7 to 5.

The Eagles can clinch their season's series with Baltimore tonight, having won four games, lost two and tied one thus far. They also can just about assure themselves of a fourth place finish and a place in the Eastern League's championship play-off next month by taking a 10-point lead over fifth place Baltimore.

Corpl. Dave Walsh, a winger who formerly pastimed with the Boston Olympics and who now is stationed at Aberdeen, Md. Irving Schuman, a defenseman and a Baltimore boy with hockey playing experience, and Jack Riley, a center and winger are the newcomers aligned by the Orioles.

Walsh and Schuman are certainties to oppose the Eagles tonight, while Riley also may report in time to compete. Riley, has been playing with the Irish Pats in the Montreal Senior Group.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

The Widener Charity Chest, Inc., takes over Hialeah for the day this afternoon. This nonprofit corporation was formed prior to the beginning of the 1939 season, and since then one day has been set aside each meeting by the Miami Jockey Club to enable the Widener Chest sponsors to carry on charitable efforts which will be of benefit to worthy causes in the Greater Miami area and Florida. Basil James, the pride and joy of Sunnyside, Washington, continues in the spotlight here. By riding three winners Wednesday, Basil stretched his lead to 18 winners for the meeting. Con McCreary follows with 12. Maurice Peters, Johnny Gilbert, Eddie Arcaro and Ira Hanford trail the peacemakers. Willie Day is usurping the leadership among the apprentices with 13 firsts, followed by Warren Mehrtens with 11; Suertero, winner of the seventh race Wednesday, in the silks of Isadore Bieber, is a half-brother to the accomplished Ligaroti which as star of the Binglin Stable in 1935 won the Bay Meadows Fashion Stake, the Inglewood mile, the America, the Alaho, the Del Mar and San Raphael Handicaps. Mrs. E. K. Bryson's 2-year-old, Spanish Son, by Chance Son-Spanish Miss, unseated his rider Sunday morning, ran away and disappeared. After an intensive search, the juvenile was discovered some time later in a distant field contentedly munching grass in the middle of a herd of cows. The colt was skinned up a bit but otherwise unhurt. The second round of the Hialeah trainers' race for the $500 Miami Jockey Club bonus, is off to sizzling start. Four trainers were tied for the lead after four days of the second lap had elapsed. Bert Pomeroy, "Big Jim" Healy had Ab "Bob" Robertson, trainer for John C. Clark, each had 12 points. Hirsch Jacobs, winner of the first round, is next with ten points. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—TWO TIMER had bad luck last out. KING'S GAMBIT has worked good. STEER CLEAR has outside chance.

Second race—BALLINDERRY is dropping down in class. LIGHT SWEEPER is the real contender. ST. DISMAS has early foot and outside chance.

Third race—SPREAD EAGLE outclasses this field. REMEMBERING is the one to beat. DARK LAD has the outside chance at a price.

Fifth race—HY COP is the clocker's special. DISLAYER'S last bang-up race is the one to trim. QUAKERTOWN a long shot having chance.

Sixth race—CUTE TRICK worked good for this. CIS MARION will be right there if top one makes any mistakes. LADY WATERLOO is sharp.

Seventh race—LOVELY DAWN'S last win was a bang-up race. Should trim this kind of company. CHALLANTE has his class back and is the contender. LADY INFINITE should take the show award.

Eighth race—SANDY BOOT has a good chance to whip this field. LA JOYA is the one to beat. CHARMING HEROD is a long shot.

Best bet—LOVELY DAWN.

Busy Sports Program Set For 'Y' Boys

An elaborate program of athletic events will be among features in the boys' department of the Central Young Men's Christian Association this month.

Tonight, a fencing tournament will be held for boys of the different age groups. Next on the program is a city-wide swim meet, sponsored by the Southeast Boys Club, scheduled for tomorrow. The Y. M. C. A. plans to enter 12 boys in the meet.

Next Monday, a "thousand-point contest" will be inaugurated in the boys' pool in the building at 1732 G Street Northwest, under direction of Edward Thacker, boys' aquatic director. The contest will be strung out over a ten-week period. Points are to be compiled in various swimming and diving events.

On February 13 a games program will be held in the boys' gymnasium.

Mexican Poloists Defeat Texans

Mexico City, Feb. 5 (AP).—Scoring their first goal 20 seconds after the throw-in, a Mexican army polo team matched an expected offensive with an air-tight defense today to defeat the Texas all-Stars, 6 to 4.

Taking the ball at the start of the game, the Mexicans ran away with it and scored their first goal in three strokes. Lieut. Jesus Grijalva was credited with the goal, as well as with four others of the Mexicans' six.

Pirate Rookie Submits Contract

Pittsburgh, Feb. 5 (AP).—Bill Clemenson, 22-year-old right-hand hurler from Santa Cruz, Calif., sent his signed contract for the 1942 season to the Pittsburgh Pirates today with a note that he had been deferred to Army classification 1-B because of an injury to his left arm. He was hurt in an automobile accident two years ago.

OUT HUNTING . .

With Jack Bell

For the man who likes his scattergun shooting, especially the newcomer with an itching trigger finger, he should be able to get his fill on Sunday, February 8. The Potomac Skeet and Trap Club has set this day aside for a benefit shoot, and the proceeds will go toward a worthy cause.

The club will be open to the public, offering the shooter an opportunity to contribute toward a cause for our fighting boys, as well as meeting a grand bunch of sportsmen, among whom will be found many of the country's leading skeet and trap shots.

JACK BELL

George Deyoe, of Washington, who was the unanimous choice of the all-American Skeet Committee, to captain the 1942 all-American skeet team, on the strength of his 1941 record. George captured a string of 25 skeet championships during the year and finished with an all-gauge average of .990 on 1950 targets.

Tom Harden, club president, predicts one of the largest crowds ever for the event. The prizes will be defense stamps. Frank Huesman, manager of the club, is making elaborate plans to make this shoot one to be remembered. Entries and further information can be obtained from Huesman, who now holds out at the Parker-Whelen gun shop on Fourteenth Street. A professional champion in his own right, he is also considered one of the country's shotgun and rifle experts. He is always on hand at the club every Sunday, ready to instruct and help anyone in wing shooting. The club is located on Agar Road, just over the District line.

New York State Senator Thomas C. Desmond, who wrote the original "plumage law" forbidding the sale of plumage, skin or body of any wild bird, agreed to introduce an amendment to the law, exempting fishing flies from the proviso of this "plumage law."

Although Senator Desmond, who is also a director of the Audubon Society, sponsors of the law, introduced the original bill which was passed and signed, he stated he had not thoroughly understood the hardships it would impose on anglers and fly-tyers.

Representatives of the society sought to compromise by offering to agree to an amendment permitting the use of the plumage from the Mandarin Wood Duck, Jungle-Cock and Golden Pheasant for tying commercial flies; however, this move failed.

This failure to agree to a reasonable compromise, the sportsman should understand, was not necessarily due to the attitude of the Audubon Society as an organization, but was mainly due to one or two officials of the society.

It's hardly necessary to point out that this campaign to prohibit the use of feathers taken from legally killed birds is beginning to find the going quite bumpy. While New York State's sportsmen were caught asleep, they now are putting up a front that is going to be difficult to break down.

It is unfortunate that so much money and time are being dissipated in an attempt to force unpopular laws on the majority, when there are so many big things in the conservation field to do. Already we are faced with a curtailment of the activities of our conservation agencies and diversion of conservation funds to other channels.

A Michigan conservation officer found an illegally killed buck hanging in the woods two days before the opening of the hunting season. He inserted a 1918 dime in one hoof and scratched one antler. On opening day two hunters very proudly were dragging the deer out, and when approached stated that they shot the deer one hour after the opening. Accused of having shot it days before the season, they of course, denied it. The officer's dime established the illegality of the kill and brought a plea of guilty from the possessors.

Manfredo Suspended

Nick Manfredo, Baltimore middleweight, has been suspended by the District of Columbia Boxing Commission for 30 days for failure to honor an agrement with Promoter Joe Turner on the night of February 2, it was announced yesterday.

Guerin, George, 2 'Bug'

Eddie Gustafson Is Lost to G. W. Five for Rest of Season

Big Center Has Broken Bone in Foot

Reichwein Likely Starter Against St. John's Monday In Garden Game

George Washington's threefold ambitions over the remainder of the season—beating St. John's in the Garden next Monday, taking the second game of the Georgetown series and winning the Southern Conference, were jolted yesterday when X-rays showed Center Ed Gustafson will be lost to the team with a broken bone in his foot.

Gustafson, a 6-foot-3 sophomore, the tallest man on the squad, has started very game but Monday night's encounter with Virginia and is one of Coach Bil Reinhart's most valuable men. "Gussie" scored 54 points in his first ten games, but has proven most valuable under the basket, where he has monopolized rebound balls and used his height to advantage.

The husky youngster from Moline, Ill., a football letter winner, complained of pains in his foot last weekend and did not make the Virginia trip with the squad. Trainer George Lentz turned him over to Dr. Richard Castell, team physician, when the injured foot did not respond to treatment and the broken bone was discovered under X-rays yesterday morning. Gustafson's foot will be in a cast for nine weeks.

Reichwein May Get Job

Ted Reichwein, another outstanding sophomore prospect, may take over the Colonial's center duties for the remainder of the season although the position is subject to change. Reichwein has little varsity experience, playing in only four games to date.

Reinhart scouted St. John's in Madison Square Garden last night when the Redmen defeated Manhattan, 58-38, in the opener of an all-New York program. George Washington beat Joe Lopchick's charges late last season at Riverside Stadium and has won three of the last five games in the series.

George Washington has two other games scheduled next week, Furman in Tech gym on Thursday and Richmond in the Virginia capital on Saturday, both Southern Conference engagements.

Travis Making Runaway Race In Scoring

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 5.—Given a brief breathing spell in the State college basketball campaign until the cage warfare resumes tomorrow night, the scoring statistician delved into the records today in an effort to find something to comment about with the exception of the University of Maryland's tall Terrapin, Ernie Travis.

So the figures—and they never lie if added correctly—responded with a few interesting facts, besides the now general acceptance that Travis will easily cop the Maryland individual scoring title unless he plays the remaining games on crutches.

The big Terp soph center, rolling along at a 15.7 point-per-game clip, bounced over the 200 mark in two games this week, with 39 counters—19 against V. M. I. Monday and 20 against Washington and Lee Tuesday—for a 221 total.

Samele, with 18 points made against Catholic University Wednesday evening, climbed into a tie for second place with Nat Winitsky, Baltimore University ace. Both now have 131, or exactly 90 less than Travis. And challenging the runners-up is another Baltimore University star, Paul Oberhaus, whose chart shows 130 points.

Stevens Is Ninth

One of them, Tommy Mont, the University of Maryland's football and basketball star from Cumberland, moved into the top ten for the first time this year. A sophomore, Mont made it an even 100 with 11 points against Washington and Lee Tuesday night.

Bernie Thobe, of Loyola's Greyhounds, Mason-Dixon Conference leaders, and Ed Mogowski, of Western Maryland, were knotted at fourth position with 109 points. Capt. Bill Harkins, of the surprising Mount St. Mary's Mountaineers, was only two points back at 107; Vic Bock, of Loyola, next with 103, just ahead of Mont.

The first 10 Maryland scoring leaders (with ties) including games of February 4:

Washington Brewers Face Trenton Tonight

The Washington Brewers, with an important game with the Wilmington Blue Bombers coming up Sunday night at Heurich gym., will invade Trenton tonight to face the Trenton Tigers.

Washington will be seeking its third straight in the second half, while by the same token the Tigers hope to avenge last Sunday's 31-to-30 setback at the hands of the Brewers in the Heurich gym.

2 Games on District Soccer Card Sunday

Two games are on the Washington-Suburban Soccer League schedule this Sunday, both having a bearing on second-half leadership. Regal Clothiers face the Washington-British at Gonzaga, and Maryland Sport Club engages Waldorf at the Old Pine Grove racetrack. Both contests start at 2:30.

American, Catholic U. Play at Home Tonight

Randolph Macon Visits Eagle Gym; Gallaudet Visits C. U. in Conference

The Mason-Dixon college basketball standings will be subject to change after a pair of conference clashes here tonight, Randolph-Macon at American University, and Gallaudet at Catholic U., with both scheduled for 8:30 starting times.

The visiting Yellow Jackets have a clean conference record and will be slight favorites over American U., which has not played for nearly a month because of midyear examinations. Randolph-Macon has a clean conference record of three victories and no defeats while A. U. has won one and lost two.

Catholic U., upset by Washington College on Wednesday, will attempt to boost its conference record above the .500 mark in meeting Gallaudet in the Brookland gym. The Cards have won five and lost as many, while Gallaudet has beaten Maryland State Teachers twice but lost its other five conference games.

Randolph Macon trimmed Roanoke early this week and comes here with one of the best records of Virginia's smaller schools. The Jackets are virtually assured of a place in the conference playoffs, as is Catholic, but American and Gallaudet are very much on the border line.

Two local games are included on tomorrow night's three-game college card, Washington and Lee at Maryland at 8 p. m., and Gallaudet at American University at 8:30. Maryland must beat the Generals or lose all hope of a conference berth. Georgetown will continue its road trip, meeting Marquette in the Chicago Garden in a preliminary to the DePaul-Loyola intracity encounter.

Garibaldi Disposes of Luttrell In Arena Wrestling Headliner

1500 Fans See Grudge Mat Bout At Turner's Arena; Luttrell Floored

Some 1500 customers sat entranced as the fine Italian hand of Gino Garibaldi artistically reduced Cowboy Luttrell, the Big Wind from Texas, to a gentle zephyr in the grudge bout which featured Joe Turner's wrestling show last night.

The aforementioned paw was tightly clenched when Gino let it fly in a vicious chop to the Luttrell puss and floored the cowhand. He quickly followed this with a body press to take the decision after 16 furious minutes which packed more gore than the first 500 pages of "Gone With the Wind."

Luttrell, who was disqualified last week for his bizaare tactics against Gariboldi, launched the engagement by attacking Gino's phiz with a taped fist. Garibaldi promptly retaliated by punting the Cowboy over the press box and onto the floor. Then he missed a flying tackle as Luttrell clambered back in, and became the victim of a strangle hold. As he flopped helplessly about on the canvas like a speared sturgeon, Referee Casey Berger stepped in and orderer a truce. Luttrell, who was a bit hard of understanding, failed to respond and the burly Berger beat him vigorously about the ears until he turned loose. Then, beaming with scant comprehension, Luttrell got the same grip several more times and the referee was forced to do as much clubbing as the principals.

Luttrell's next strategy was to massage Garibaldi with peanut hulls. This was the signal for the fans to fire all movable articles at the villain. Disconcerted, Luttrell gave his opponent time to rally and Garibaldi bounced off the ropes ostensibly to try a flying tackle. However, he dropped Luttrell with a punch and then clamped him with a body press while Berger tolled the count.

Leo (the Lion) Numa and Emil Dusek struggled to a rough draw in a semifinal, which boasted enough rule violations to work the fans up into a fine lather of indignation. Emil was the first offender when he gnawed at Numa's arm, and then Leo let fly with his dictionary of misdeeds. They were still full of fire at the bell, and gave Promoter Turner several minutes of overtime fisticuffs.

The Toy Bulldogs, Maurice La Chappelle and Ace Freeman, supplied the comedy when they bested the two-man team of Herbie Freeman (no relation) and Jim Austeri. Austeri went out first in 20 minutes on Ace Freeman's cradle hold, then the two winners ganged fat Herbie with flying tackles and a body press to retire him a minute later.

Messrs. H. Freeman and Austeri suffered throughout from lack of coordination, and each adopted the policy of "Let's you and them fight." This was bad for the morale, and the opponents were quick to seize this fifth-column aid.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Jayvees Beat Coolidge

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase junior varsity scored a 32-to-25 victory over the Coolidge jayvees yesterday in the latter's gymnasium. John Ferry, with nine points, was high for the winner. Lefferty was high for the losers with 10 points.

Scholastic Scoring Lead To Sideroff

The scholastic cage scoring lead in this vicinity remained in the capable hands of Bill Sideroff, of Hyattsville High, last week as the sensational point-maker amassed 19 points against Mount Rainier. His total of 136 points in 10 games, for an average of 13.60 per game, gave him more than a full point edge on "Cotton" Smith, his nearest competitor from Friends School.

Most surprising drop of the week was suffered by Don Hillock, Woodrow Wilson star, who managed for only five points as his team whipped Central. Hillock dropped from second to fourth, allowing both Smith, a former leader, and St. Albans' Earl Elliott to go ahead.

Wilson and Episcopal, of Alexandria, continued to boast four players each with averages of five points or better. In addition to Hillock, the Tigers have Freddy Vinson, who moved up from eighth to sixth place with an average of 10.13; Billy Jawish and Johnny Coffey, Episcopal's stars are Hamill, Burnett, Black and Sackett.

Catholic U. Boxers Ready For Maryland

Except for the beautiful shiner being sported by Huck Hughes, a memento of his bout last week, Catholic University's boxers are ready and even anxious for the start of their intracity clash with Maryland at Brookland tomorrow night, it was announced yesterday.

The fact that they will be underdogs hasn't dimmed the Cards' hopes, which depend to a large extent on the aforementioned Hughes. It will be the clever tow-head who faces Maryland's 145-pound senior, Hotsy Alperstein, and the Cards believe that battle will be one of the decisive ones.

That C. U. battlers are in fine fettle for tomorrow night's scrap was indicated in yesterday's drills. Every man on the squad worked spiritedly, causing Coach Eddie LaFond considerable pleasure.

The outcome, as LaFond sees it, hinges on his ability to find a lightweight in time for action. So far he has come up with surprising discoveries in Bernie Kellenyi and Ralph Obregon, but he is having difficulty finding a match for the Terps' Tommy Jones.

In his most optimistic moments LaFond can predict only a draw, however. He thinks Hughes can handle Alperstein, "Sneeze" Kycewski can take care of Heavyweight Len Rodman, and Ted Mandris will get a victory over Maryland's representative, but the fourth winner evades him. That could possibly be Price Welch, who meets Joe Cicala in the 120-pound opener.

Defending Champion Had About Decided To Give Up Her Title

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—The Military Academy at West Point has a good skating rink and so Jane Vaughn Sullivan, wife of an Army officer, will be able to defend her National Senior Figure Skating championship this year after all.

When the 20-year-old star married Lieut. Henry Riggs Sullivan last June, she decided to quit competition and skate just for fun. Her husband then was stationed at Bangor, Me., with an Air Corps unit, and the emphasis on skiing there clinched her decision.

Later, however, Lieut. Sullivan was transferred to West Point, and, says Jane:

"West Point cadets have an excellent ice hockey rink. I was able to use it regularly and because I could continue my practice, I decided to defend my title at Chicago (February 19, 20, 21) rather than give up the sport."

She began skating in 1932. In 1935 she captured the Philadelphia senior women's figure skating title and held it five year. In 1936 she won the United States women's novice crown, and for the past three years she has been the senior women's Eastern champion.

Also seeking a national figure skating title at Chicago this month wil be Mrs. Sullivan's brother, Arthur R. (Buddy) Vaughn, who, at 17, is the former national novice and junior champion and runner-up to Gene Turner for the 1941 national senior men's crown. A week ago he won the senior men's Eastern States championship.

The Story of 'Pounds'

Dear Boss: Miami, Fla.

Let's make this a radio quiz game. See if you can identify this person by the clues given. Here goes:

He was born in Washington, D. C. It was about the turn of the century when the nurse turned him over and his father took one look at him and said, "Those things we used on the other boys won't do for this one. I'm going out and buy a dozen sheets." His father ran a grocery store, a fortunate coincidence in this case, if you know what I mean. At the age of 4, he disappeared one afternoon and was found the next morning the bottom of a barrel that had been filled with ginger snaps.

HAIGHT

At 6 his curls were cut off. The barber must have frightened him because to this day he never gets a haircut until his wife grabs him by the ear and drags him to a barber ship. He always was an ardent movie fan. When 8 years old he set a record by sneaking in to see 39 out of a possible 45 episodes of "The Perils of Pauline."

At 10 he was a regular leftfielder for his neighborhood team, "The Little Potatoes, We're Hard to Peel." His first home run came when, with the score tied at 1-1 in the eleventh inning, and Cowtown was at bat, he heard his mother ring the dinner bell and ran home. His action might have been overlooked had not the Cowtown catcher hit a pop fly to leftfield that scored two runs and ended the game. The next day he was one Little Potato who was half peeled and it wasn't from sunburn.

At 12 he inherited the family nose guard and began his football career. At this time his stomach resembled a football, making him a keen asset when the Little Potatoes worked deception plays.

At 14 he became waterboy for the Business High team and the following year he wore a football uniform but was still waterboy.

He stopped smoking cornsilk at 15 but he has been corny ever since. At 16 he decided he was too old to sweep up the ball park so he could get in for nothing and was large enough to take command of a good branch in the tree that towered above the rightfield fence.

Spent two years winning World War I in the Philadelphia Navy Yard and adjacent amusement parks.

Never having attained more than a bare passing mark in English, he decided on a journalistic career. He became such a nuisance around the sports department that the editor hired him so he could send him on errands and get him out of the office.

In 1926 he wrote famous sports scoop, "Georgetown Peewees defeated the Chevy Chase Hawks by the score of 18 to 16 yesterday on the latter's diamond."

It took him three years to talk his way to assistant sports editor and three days to talk himself out of the job.

Having eaten horseradish on steak for years, he talked the office into making him a race horse expert. Since then his selections have been invaluable to racegoers. They buy the paper to get the horses he likes, they eliminate those and then look over the others to pick winners.

In recent years he has become a champion at finding excuses to get out of town. Around the country at various race tracks he is known as the best "over the shoulder" writer in the East. Of late he has developed a mania for having his picture taken in ridiculous poses. He put the jinx on the Redskins last year, corroded the transmitter at WOL, had a race horse named after him and wrote a lot of punk letters that began "Dear Boss."

He is as broad as he is long, has three chins and two stomachs, laughs at his own jokes and if he knows you he owes you.

What's my name?

Always your Ace,
DR. I. Q. HAIGHT.

P. S.—If you know the answer, mail it in at once and inclose the dome of the Capitol.

Redskins to Try Hand at Bowling

Under the sponsorship of the Colonial Village Recreation Center a group of pro gridders, including Bill Young, Bob Masterson, Frank Filchock, Mickey Parks and Clem Stralka, will match pinfalls with a picked team at the suburban alley. Starting time will be 8:30, and spectators will be admitted free of charge.

Opposing the questionably strong Redskin team will be a quintet selected from among Cletus Parnell, George Wilbur, Jack Siegel, Guy Shields, Jim Luckett and Abe Rosenfeld.

Capital Store Sales Up 46% During Week

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, source of the figures, also reported that local store sales in the four weeks ended January 30 were 52 per cent heavier than in the corresponding 1941 period.

The week's upturn in the Fifth Federal Reserve District was 43 per cent, and in the four-week period was 45 per cent.

Historic highs are being made in practically all lines of Washington business, as indicated by the usual trade barometers. Expanding Government payrolls, spectacular population growth and defense activity are among the reasons.

During the past week new records for the first month this year were reported in bank clearings, postal receipts and telephone calls.

Shortage Seen In Brushes but Not in Paints

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 5.—The war won't interfere with your plans to paint your house, if the painters don't joint the Army and if they can get brushes. At least, there will be plenty of paint, although it might take a little while longer than usual to dry.

George H. Priest, of Washington, priorities consultant for the National Paint and Lacquer Association, told delegates to the fifty-eighth annual convention of Painting and Decorating Contractors of America here today that the paint was still available, but——

Substitutes Available

"In general," he said, "all the materials we need for war purposes and civilian uses are available with few exceptions. Diversion of certain things needed in the manufacture of paint is causing some shortage, but that will be made up by use of substitutes.

"For example, we used to use about 75 per cent of all the toluol. Now it is forbidden, and the entire supply is used for production of TNT. Also, there is a shortage of tung oil, which came from China; a shortage of tin, that came from Malaya, and natural resins, that came from the Netherlands East Indies. Nevertheless substitutes can be used.

"The difference will come in interior finishes. We used to say varnishes that dried slowly were not good varnishes. Now we're going back to those old slow-drying varnishes and like it."

Synthetic Bristles Likely

George S. Stuart, of Philadelphia, secretary and executive director, said painters would be greatly affected by war in the Far East because bristles for brushes are imported from that area and "we have been told that next year we'll be able to get 20 per cent of the brushes we have been using."

He said synthetic bristles made from nylon or fiber would have to replace pig bristles and weren't "nearly as good as the genuine, but will have to suffice until we can give Hitler and Hirohito the brushoff."

Dividend Skipped, Investors File Suit

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—A stockholders suit for a judgment totaling $10,252 from the Chicago & Alton Railway for alleged failure to pay a quarterly dividend on February 1 was filed in circuit court yesterday.

The suit, filed in behalf of 81 persons and firms owning 6835 shares of stock of the Kansas City, St. Louis & Chicago Railroad Co., acquired in 1932 by the Alton road, charged that the February dividend was the first not paid since the stock was issued in 1879. At that time an agreement was entered providing for payment of $1.50 per share each quarter, the suit said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Hedging pressure and profit taking sales weighed heavily on the grain market today in the absence of sufficient buying support to prevent fractional price declines.

Prices slipped fractions to a cent a bushel or more early in the day and then spent the remainder of the session trying to retain lost ground purchasing of dealers who had sold short previously lifted rye and soybeans back to around or above previous closing levels at one time, but the market's recuperative power generally was limited by the fact buyers submitted only small orders.

Railroads' Net Of Half Billion Best Since 1930

By the Associated Press

The Nation's class 1 railroads had an estimated net income of $500,545,671 in 1941, which was more than two and a half times the 1940 profit, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

This was the first time since 1930 that their income exceeded the half billion dollar mark. In that year, the net was $523,907,472.

Operating revenues last year totaled $5,346,699,998, an increase of $1,048,700,000 over 1940 and an increase of $66,000,000, compared with 1930.

Net railway operating income before payment of interest and rentals for the Nation's 135 Class I railroads last year amounted to $999,502,930, a return of 3.79 per cent on property investment, compared with a return of 2.61 per cent in 1940 and 3.36 in 1930.

Operating expenses in 1941 amounted to $3,664,175,018, an increase of $574,000,000 compared with 1940, but a decrease of $267,000,000 compared with 1930.

The railroads which reported to the AAR's bureau of railway economics operated 232,192 miles of track.

The association reported that 28 Class I railroads failed to earn interest and rentals in 1941. Estimated net income for December was $55,643,010, compared with $51,078,421 in December, 1940. December operating revenues totaled $479,560,154, an increase of $98,000,000, compared with the same month a year before, while operating expenses amounted to $352,531,871, an increase of $86,000,000 over the 1940 month.

Rail Loadings Show 14.2% Gain Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 815,567 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 2237 cars, or 0.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week, an increase of 101,213 cars, or 14.2 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 157,737 cars, or 24.0 per cent, compared with 1940.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 94.1 (New 1941-42 high) compared with 93.2 the previous week, and 83.3 a year ago.

Publishers Act to Forestall Possible Newsprint Rationing

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—The American Newspaper Publishers Association said today publishers generally were taking steps which it was believed would forestall conditions that would justify Government control of newsprint by rationing.

"The A. N. P. A. is mindful," the association stated through Cranston Williams, general manager, "and so are publishers generally of the necessity of conserving newsprint in every way possible."

"An estimate of the newsprint situation at this time has interest because of some statements that newsprint rationing is either on top of us immediately or inevitable before the end of this year.

"Despite assurances from the sources of newsprint supply for United States newspapers, that they feel they will be able to supply newsprint in 1942 where contracts are made by publishers and shipments are taken in equal monthly installments, it is important that a number of different factors be considered.

"While well informed sources insist that the transportation system is able to care for the load of all traffic in 1942, it must be recognized that the transportation problem may become acute at any time because of uncertain or unexpected war developments. Up to now those familiar with the transportation system say that the volume can be handled without the necessity of general or extensive priorities.

"Reports from Canada indicate the necessity of carefully watching such things as the availability of labor, quantity of wood being cut, handling of wood from the forest to the mills and the possibility of increased need of power for war production.

"It is believed that newspapers should, if they have not already done so, take steps to conserve newsprint, because conservation will save money and make more material available for other paper and pulp products.

"We know that advertising volume bears a direct relation to newsprint consumption and the effect of the tire rationing program on circulation distribution is not known now with sufficient accuracy to justify any kind of guess. All sources in touch with advertising refuse to hazard anything like an estimate in figures for 1942 and any kind of reduction in advertising linage in newspapers in 1942 will bring reduced newsprint consumption without doubt.

"Many publishers point out conditions of increasing costs confronting them and any increase in newsprint prices may bring a reduction in the amount of newsprint consumption."

No. 33—Losses of Farmers

Losses incurred in the operation of farms as business enterprises are deductible from gross income. If farm products are held for favorable markets no deduction on account of shrinkage in weight or physical value, or by reason of deterioration in storage, is allowed, except as such shrinkage may be reflected in an inventory if used in determining profits.

The destruction by frost, storm, flood, or fire of a prospective crop is not a deductible loss in computing income since it represents the loss of anticipated profits which have never been reported as income. Likewise, a farmer engaged in raising and selling livestock, such as cattle, sheep and hogs, is not entitled to claim as a loss the value of animals that perish from among those animals that were raised on the farm, except as such loss is reflected in an inventory, if used. If livestock has been purchased for any purpose, and afterward dies from disease, exposure, or injury, or is killed by order of the authorities of a State or the United States, the actual purchase price of such livestock, less any depreciation allowable as a deduction in respect of such perished livestock, may be deducted as a loss if the loss is not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The actual cost of other property (with proper adjustments for depreciation) which is destroyed by order of State or Federal authorities may likewise be claimed as a loss. If reimbursement is made by a State or the United States in whole or in part on account of stock killed or other property destroyed in respect of which a loss was claimed in a prior year, the amount received is required to be reported as income for the year in which reimbursement is made. The cost of any feed, pasture, or care which has been deducted as an expense of operation must not be included as part of the cost of the stock for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of a deductible loss.

If gross income is ascertained by the use of inventories, no deduction can be taken separately for livestock or products lost during the year, whether purchased for resale or produced on the farm, as such losses will be reflected in the inventory by reducing the amount of livestock or products on hand at the close of the year, which has the effect of reducing gross income from business by the amount of the loss.

If an individual owns and operates a farm in addition to being engaged in another trade or business or calling, and sustains a loss from the farming operations, such loss may be deducted from gross income received from all sources in determining the taxpayer's net income, provided such farm is not operated for recreation or pleasure.

If a farm is operated for recreation or pleasure and not on a commercial basis, and if the expenses incurred in connection therewith are in excess of the receipts therefrom, the entire receipts from the sale of products may be ignored in rendering a return of income, and the expenses incurred, being regarded as personal expenses, will not constitute allowable deductions for Federal income-tax purposes.

Bell Aircraft Net Soars to $1,970,645

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 5 (AP).—Bell Aircraft Corporation reported today a profit of $1,970,645 after taxes and contingencies for the year ended December 31, 1941, compared with $284,745 for 1940.

Gross sales were reported as $46,414,444 compared with $5,188,001 in 1940. Both profits and sales were the largest in the company's history.

The company, which manufactures the Airacobra pursuit plane (O-39), applied $1,200,000 to its contingencies fund, taking action similar to that of other companies engaged in war production.

Because of Government restrictions, information normally given in Bell's annual statement was withheld.

Egg Drop Continues

Hog Prices Surge To New 4-Year Top

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Farmers who brought their pigs to market today received the highest prices in more than four years as all packing interests bid aggressively for a limited supply.

Best hogs sold for $12.85 a hundred pounds, 30 cents above the previous four-year peak established earlier this week. This compared with a top of $8.30 in the same week last year and $5.65 two years ago.

Piano Firm Is Sold

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Winter & Co., piano manufacturers in which Sears, Roebuck & Co., has had an interest since 1919, has been sold to a syndicate made up of the present management and New England and New York interests, E. P. Brooks, Sears vice president, announced today.

Rail Shares Up As Rest of List Inches Lower

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 5.—Rails and specialties managed to keep up a moderate amount of rising steam in today's stock market, but many leaders in the recent three-day recovery faltered.

Prices were somewhat hesitant at the start and generally lower around midday. Selective comebacks appeared in the final hour but declines of fractions to a point or so were well distributed at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 36.2, its first stumble this week. Dealings slowed appreciably in the morning, but picked up a bit at the last. Transfers of 440,140 shares compared with 501,630 Wednesday.

Good News Plentiful

Business news, for the most part, was on the side of bullish forces—last week's freight loadings were off less than seasonally, retail spending was being maintained at a high level, and there was another batch of good earnings statements and favorable dividends.

On the other hand, war news from the Far Pacific still was of a doubtful character and the lack of a great deal of vigor in the recent upturn gave some the idea the move was more or less technical and hardly was a signal for a definite reversal in trend.

Stocks on the losing end included United States Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich, United States Rubber common and preferred, United Aircraft, International Harvester, American Telephone, Western Union, Anaconda, Kennecott, American du Pont, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Consolidated Edison.

Rail List Buoyant

Nickel Plate preferred rose 3 points to 50, a new 1941-42 top. Modest improvement was retained by Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Atlantic Coast Line, Nickel Plate common, Great Northern, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Loew's and J. C. Penney.

Bonds were a trifle uneaven, with some rails getting support. Commodities were mixed. While cotton was up 50 cents to $1 a bale, wheat at Chicago was off ½ to ¾ of a cent a bushel and corn down ⅜ to ⅝. Hogs were up 25 to 35 cents to a new 4-year peak.

Among gainers in a ragged curb were Aluminum Ltd., Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal, Humble Oil, N. J. Zinc and Pantepec. A shade in arrears were American Cyanamid, American Gas and Gulf Oil. Mead Johnson dropped 3⅛ and Singer Manufacturing 1¼. Turnover here approximated 89,000 shares versus 77,000 the day before.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Well, my home economics teacher says most women lack a knowledge of proper nutrition and actually STARVE their families!"

Listen! with Glynn

Which is by way of telling you, as a clinical report of progress, that "Young Doctor Malone" is now more than three years old and as healthy and flourishing as medical science and a couple of medically-minded script writers can make him.

"Young Doctor Malone," in case you don't already know, is the title of the dramatic opus which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every weekday at 2 o'clock. And three yars of unflagging medical-dramatic activities is a lot of said activities, probably worth charting for those who are interested.

You might be impressed to find out, for instance, that Doctor Malone has treated some 5000—count them, 5000—patients in that time, which is a lot when you consider that he only has 15 minutes a day to do it. In fact, Doctor Malone, as played by Alan Bunce, has inoculated the entire population of Bellmore, the fictional Mid-western town in which he operates, which is also some inoculating.

But that's not all. He's also attended, just as a sideline, some 2000 natives on a Caribbean island during an epidemic that had the good sense to occur just when he was spending his vacation there.

He's done any number of operations, with all the eclat that is required of operations when they're heard going out over radio's ether, and above that, he's had time to have a very full private life.

Maine Society First to Aid Blood Bank

The Maine State Society of Washington yesterday became the first to contribute to the 1942 campaign for Children's Hospital Blood and Serum Bank Fund.

A check for $14.45 was received by The Post, representing one-half the amount raised at a party given last Saturday night. The other half went to the Mile of Dimes.

Other State societies are planning similar benefits this month to aid the drive sponsored by the Washington Bridge League, American Legion and The Post to maintain the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital.

Hundreds of other social and fraternal organizations and individuals will give bridge parties, dances and other events, ranging from small four-handed games in private homes to an interfraternal bowling tournament scheduled for Sunday night at the Convention Hall alleys.

Capitol Heights Mayor Fined $15 In Tiff With Chief

A dispute Sunday with the town police chief cost Mayor William E. Steele, of Capitol Heights, Md., $15 yesterday when he was convicted by Prince Georges County Police Judge Alan Bowie of disorderly conduct. The mayor was acquitted of a charge of drunkenness.

Sergt. Buck Erskine, who swore to the warrants against the mayor, testified that Steele stripped him of his badge and took the town scout car away from him during a heated argument Sunday in front of Councilman Giles Gainer's home in the town.

Councilmen Alfred Bonn, Carl Pippert and Gainer corroborated Sergt. Erskine's account of the affair.

Testifying in his own behalf, Mayor Steele denied the intoxication charge and produced witnesses who testified that he was not under the influence of liquor. The mayor said he took Sergt. Erskine's badge from him because he planned to bring charges against him.

Dies' Son Joins Navy, Asks Mosquito Boat Job

Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, announced yesterday that his son, Martin Dies 3d, 20, had enlisted here in the Navy, had been sworn in and had applied for a job on a mosquito boat.

Correction

By applying to the Defense Housing Registry located in Post Square opposite the District Building property owners desiring to turn vacant space into defense dwellings may have free technical assistance from Home Owner's Loan Corporation experts, Howard F. Vickery, director of public relations, said yesterday.

Financing of conversion work, however, must be done by private institutions since Federal loans are not available for conversion work, Vickery said. In Wednesday morning's Post, it was incorrectly stated that Federal funds could be obtained for this work. The Post regrets its error.

Talbot Gets House Seat

Joseph E. Talbot, (Republican), was sworn in yesterday as a member of the House from the Fifth Connecticut District, succeeding J. Joseph Smith, (Democrat), who resigned upon appointment to the Federal bench.

Defense Plant Work Asked For Women

Women should not be restricted to the least skilled jobs in national defense, but should be trained—if necessary—to fit effectively into the war industries where their skill could be best used, Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, declared yesterday.

"One fourth to one third of the aircraft assembly jobs can be done by women," she said, commenting she knew of only one aircraft manufacturing center where supplementary training courses are open to women "although all have training programs for men."

Miss Anderson declared it is easier to recruit women for jobs today, simply because there are more of them ready to be hired. She also emphasized availability of trained professional women for plant jobs other than on production lines.

"It is important, we believe, to have a woman personnel official on the administrative staff," she said.

She said a plant survey in California showed that "as a whole men and women employes work satisfactorily together." In cases where resentment was shown at first by men superivors and workers, the feeling was later dispelled, she declared.

Cooperation Stressed In Civilian Defense

That the Government will cooperate 100 per cent with volunteer civilian defense workers, was stressed last night by Deputy Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham at a meeting at 7:30 p. m. yesterday in the Pepco Building, Tenth and E Streets Northwest.

Mileham, warden of the Mid-City area, referred to legislation recently passed by Congress appropriating 100 million dollars for Civilian Defense. It provides not only facilities and supplies for defense volunteers but money for the protection of persons and property from bombings, sabotage and other war risks.

In addition there is a new provision included in the law which provides compensation for air raid and fire wardens injured in the line of duty Mileham stated.

Taylor Warns Against U-Boat Plane Carriers

Americans were urged last night at a mass civilian defense committee to be on especial guard because the subs now prowling off the Atlantic seaboard may carry airplanes.

This warning came from William Clark Taylor, chairman of the Dupont Circle civilian defense committee, at a meeting of 800 citizens of the area in the Covenant Presbyterian Church.

A call for volunteers for civilian defense posts was issued and about 50 persons responded. That many more are needed, it was stated. Persons interested should get in touch with the deputy warden's headquarters in the Columbus University building, 1323 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

F. Moran McConihe, deputy warden, told the group that eventually the area will have over 600 air-raid wardens, including assistants.

Committee reports included those by Mrs. Ruth Lester Buchanan, emergency feeding; Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, emergency housing, and Mrs. Ellen Nester, publicity.

Taylor and the Rev. A. J. McCartney, pastor of the church, presided.

Stull Joins Defense Council As Aid to Air-Raid Chief

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, yesterday announced that Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, has joined the council staff as assistant to Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy.

Stull will be closely associated with the training program and management of the city's more than 25,000 air raid wardens.

"I shall attempt to convince those who will hear me," he said, "that it is the patriotic duty of all citizens to contribute their utmost in these dangerous times."

Other developments in District defense yesterday included:

Receipt of a letter by Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of schools, from Defense Coordinator John Russell Young assuring him he has complete control over civilian defense activities of Washington teachers.

Dr. Ballou had stated he awaited a signal from head officials before deciding what to do about defense vigils still being maintained in a few District schools.

The American Women's Voluntary Services announced an evening course in home gardening will open next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Georgetown Public Library. A series of 12 lectures, on Tuesday evenings, will be open to the public without charge.

A civilian defense registration office has been opened at 1241 Kenyon Street Northwest and will be manned from 7 to 8 p.m. nightly to receive new volunteers. Mrs. Willie A. Dodson will be in charge.

The Lincoln Civic defense area issued a call for stretcher bearer and rescue squad volunteers. The Rev. George A. Parker, chairman of the defense executive committee, stated it is important both groups be recruited and start training at once.

1500 Will Take Oath As Auxiliary Policemen

Fifteen hundred Washington citizens will take the oath of auxiliary police at 2 p. m. today at a special assembly at the Labor Department Auditorium on Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest.

The volunteers who have been fingerprinted and investigated are additions to the 3,455 members of the auxiliary who have already been sworn in.

Maj. Edward Kelly, Superintendent of Police, will preside at the ceremonies which will be attended by the District Commissioners.

Many Salvage Depots Will Be Set Up Here

Depots at which salvage materials needed for defense can be deposited will be set up in all areas of Washington under direction of the District of Columbia Federation of Citizens Associations and the Federation of Civic Associations.

Stores, business houses, private garages, sheds and basements will be utilized, the District of Columbia Salvage Committee said yesterday when announcing the neighborhood program.

The civic groups will obtain the voluntary services of Boy Scouts, junior fire wardens, members of Boys Club and other boys and girls to make door-to-door collections at households designated by the committee chairmen.

When collections at the community depots have become large enough to justify a truck pick-up, the salvage committee will be notified. Money realized from the sale of waste materials will be remitted to the neighborhood chairmen to be used as his association desires.

First Class Finishes Women's Defense Course

Mrs. Watson Miller and Mrs. Jouett Shouse will make speeches. Lieut. Glenn Miller, commandant, will present diplomas to 25.

Weather Bureau Won't Go on War Time

Everything else may go on war time February 9, but not the weather.

Weather officials explained that since weather forecasts must be based on simultaneous observations in as many parts of the world as possible, the Weather Bureau always uses standard time in its scientific work, regardless of what other kind of time may be used for other purposes.

National Forester In Chemical Class

J. S. Barrows, United States national park forester, of 1301 South Barton Street Southeast, has enrolled in the thirteenth class in chemical warfare at the War Department Civilian Defense School school authorities announced yesterday.

Barrows, who trains national park rangers in fire fighting, is taking special courses in the handling of incendiary and other type bombs, to improve the precautionary measures now used in the protection of national forests.

Boys Club Report Meeting Today

Workers of the campaign to raise $100,000 for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will have their first report luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. at the National Press Club Auditorium, Frank Sartwell, campaign secretary, announced yesterday. Progress reports will be made by Chairmen Paul D. Sleeper, Thomas P. Morgan and Kirk Miller.

Representative Katherine Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, will be the principal speaker and Ralph Goldsmith, chairman of the campaign, will preside.

The board of directors of the club will also meet today at 6 p. m. at the Ambassador Hotel to elect officers for the coming year.

District Employes To Go on Revised Schedule Monday

The change—involving a 15-minute later reporting and quitting time over earlier announced hours—was made apparently because of employe complaints.

The new schedule calls for municipal workers to report on week days at 8:15 a. m. and leave at 4:45 p. m. The Saturday hours will be from 8:15 a. m. to 12:45 p. m.

District working hours at present are from 8:45 a. m. to 4:15 p. m. and on Saturdays from 8:45 a. m. to 12:15 p. m.
